Around the World Best Minds Are Slow They Found the Baby Jewish, Not Aryan Blood

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IT IS SAID—let us hope it is true—that President Roosevelt, with all the other things on his hands, finds time to worry about the fact that Germany sells the bean in lighter than air ships, running a regular ferry service, Germany to Brazil, with side trips to the Chicago Exposition and back across the Atlantic to Germany.

The United States looks on, sends an occasional transatlantic air mail letter on a Zeppelin.

It would take a small fraction of one of the billions that the United States is spending to put this country ahead of every other nation in transatlantic flight.

Mr. Litchfield, who built the Akron, a ship sacrificed by a stupid navy rule that when a man learns how to run a dirigible he must quit and go back to sea service, declares that a regular air service could be established around the world in sixteen days with "three hops by dirigible, and part way by heavier than air plane."

The dirigible would fly from New York to southern Spain, whence passengers to Europe would be dispersed by heavier than air planes.

The next Zeppelin stop would be from southern Spain to the Dutch East Indies, from the East Indies to Manila by plane, from the Philippines across the Pacific to Oakland or some other Pacific coast port by Zeppelin, and from the Pacific coast to New York by one of the airplane lines.

If President Roosevelt really plans putting this country ahead of the whole world, in regular air transportation, around the world or from New York across the Pacific and the Atlantic oceans only, he will do a great deal to inspire respect for this country everywhere.

And the thing could be done in a really big way for less than the cost of one single battleship, that if war came would have to behidden away, because, otherwise, some air pilot would surely sink it.

"Best minds" worry about inflation, not realizing that inflation is already here. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation demands another thousand million dollars. "A thousand millions" is the financial unit now.

Whether government keeps its head buried in the sand in ostrich fashion and insists on printing interest-bearing bonds, instead of paying out new money and saving the interest, makes no difference.

Inflation with yellow paper promises to pay, bearing interest, or inflation with green promises to pay without interest, is still inflation. The difference is that you inflate wisely if you don't insist on putting an extra burden on taxpayers by paying interest when it isn't necessary.

A little boy in Buffalo who said, "I must make money," took his sisters' new story books and sold them to little boys for one cent each. And as each little boy paid his penny, the Buffalo business boy insisted on giving change because he knew that in stores they always gave change in a bit mother. At the end of the day when the books were gone, he had not made much money.

Uncle Sam, insisting on paying interest when it isn't necessary, is like that little boy who insisted on giving change. In nickels or dimes, for each one cent piece.

The powerful Dalai Lama, religious and earthly ruler of millions in Thibet, died in his retreat at Lhasa and Buddhist priests have been looking for his "reincarnation" in some new born ! by.

Now the joyful announcement is made that God had directed the new born miraculous infant to the outskirts of the city of Lhasa. You are not surprised to learn that "extraordinary astronomical phenomena," such as strange stars in the sky, announced the birth of the new Lama who will rule, with some old Lama in a brand new body.

The baby was born at exactly the hour of the old Lama's death, so that passage from the old dear body into the new baby body was instantaneous. This belief in reincarnation interests all, for while the majority here believe that we leave the earth as soon as we die, and go to Heaven, to stay there always, we cannot be absolutely sure that the other religion is wrong, since each religion is supposed to be divinely revealed as i inspired.

If by any chance we SHOULD come back to live in earthly bodies again, that would help comfort us for the innumerable massacres of so-called "inferior races." If such races, like the Bushmen, clay-eating Indians, backward tribes in the hills of Ceylon, and scum others that were killed off should come back, their spirits would neces-

Mulloney Faces Poor Debtor Court

Federal National Head Must Plead to Lynn Stock Levy

Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the closed Federal National Bank, and once head of a sixty million dollar chain of banks, will be summoned into poor debtors' court next Saturday.

The summons will be issued from Gloucester district court, within which district Mulloney claims a residence. Atty. H. D. Linscott, acting for the State National Bank of Lynn, a Federal National affiliate, is petitioner.

The petition came today as a default judgment was entered against the former bank magnate in Federal court in Boston. Because there is no Federal poor debtors' court, action follows in Gloucester.

For a man who had millions at his command, the sum defaulted was comparatively nothing—$10,690—hardly more than a good-sized bank account of any of the 60,000 depositors who suffered when the Federal National chain collepsed.

The $10,690 was due on an assessment made against Mulloney's stock holdings in the Lynn bank. He had 100 shares. The U. S. Comptroller of Currency had ordered each stockholder in the bank to pay $100 a share. Interest charges were levied when payment was delayed.

Mulloney made his home in Brookline, but his wife, Mrs. Mabel A. Mulloney, is the titleholder for a magnificent $80,000 estate on Magnolia's shores, overlooking the fabled reef of "Norman's Woe." She had pledged that estate for Mulloney's bail when he was indicted. Magnolia is in the jurisdiction of the Gloucester court.

Powerful Navy Our Cheapest Insurance for Safety, Child Says of President's Proposal

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author, and Ambassador to Italy Under Two Administrations

Washington, Jan. 10—Congress may well cheer this week over the President's demand for $53,000,000 for new naval strength in addition to $238,000,000 appropriated through the public works program.

There is no string of the new revolution tied to this. This appropriation controls neither finance, industry, nor individual liberty, by purchase or mortgage.

A proper defense is a government function. And we need defense so badly!

There may be danger in a large standing professional army. That danger is always recognized in all countries where disturbed economic or social conditions make a standing army a pawn in the scheme of power.

But a navy is a small factor in such a grab for control. Domestically, it is a wonderful training school for good, young citizenship.

From the point of view of defense, an adequate navy is such cheap insurance of safety, that in a disturbed world it is the cheapest of all insurance—it can be paid for solely by taxes on cigarettes and cosmetics.

Today, this Congress, is fully aware of the fact that disarmament is no guarantee of peace. Strip every nation of armament and they may fight with bricks, fists, clubs and pitchforks. There never was a more ridiculous piece of nonsense than the foolish idea that war and disarmament have anything to do with each other.

Disarmament saves money and that is the only reason why the dogs all agree to wear muzzles, unless some one or two reluctant dogs say: "We hope you all will wear muzzles while we go around with bare teeth."

The stark truth is that the powers, as they are called, cannot, will not, and do not disarm.

DEFENSE CHEAPEST INVESTMENT

The United States has gone on scrapping battleships, failing to build up to treaty strength, failing to keep equipment and personnel able to defend this nation.

However, the cheapest investment we can make now is defense. The creation of adequate defense will give jobs, and pay

LINDY 'GIFT' OF $250,000 EVADED TAX

Eagle May Face Grill in Air Mail Probe of Brown Deals

Washington, Jan. 10—An official of the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., told Senate investigators today that 25,000 shares of the company stock, valued at $250,000, were given to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

D. M. Sheaffer, chairman of the air company's executive committee, told the committee, which is investigating mail contract awards under the Hoover administration, of a complicated system used for what, he said, was "income tax purposes" in transferring the stock to the noted pilot.

He said the quarter of a million dollars' worth of stock was given to Lindbergh in return for "services."

The stock has been inactive recently. Today's bid price was $2.50 a share and the asked price $2.75.)

CHECK "DODGED" TAX

"In addition, it was revealed, Col. Lindbergh was advised not to keep much of the stock in his name because it "would excite a lot of attention which is quite unnecessary."

In order to make the "gift" seem all right "for income purposes," the company sent Lindberg a check for $250,000 with which he could pay for the shares.

The whole transaction was revealed when Senator Black (D.), Alabama, chairman of the committee, found a letter written on June 6, 1928, to Col. Lindbergh by C. M. Keys, president of the company, in a batch of correspondence which had been presented to him by Sheaffer.

The letter was addressed to Col. Lindbergh in care of the Guggenheim Aviation Foundation, New York.

It read:

OFFERED $250,000 CASH

"Carrying out the memorandum of agreement I have tied up for your account 25,000 shares of stock of Transcontinental Air Air Transport, Inc., at $10 per share and will deliver to you a check of the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., for $250,000 at your request.

"In order that all records shall be clear for income tax purposes please consult Col. Breckenridge Long (Lindberg's legal adviser) and see if he agrees with the following procedure:

"(1—I will deliver to you the check for $250,000 cash, together with a brief memo stating

BEACON HILL WIFE GIVEN SEPARATION

Mrs. Van Auken Tells How Husband Crippled Her Arm

Fireworks illuminating the sky with brilliant flashes and bonfires casting a red glow on the heavens from every point of the compass. The night before the Fourth!

This was the setting when Mrs. Anna S. Van Auken of Quincy was pushed into a French glass door in their Myrtle st. apartment by her husband, Dr. Ross D. Van Auken, a dentist, of Myrtle st., Beacon Hill.

When she fell into the door, she cut her left arm and severed a nerve, crippling the arm, she testified today in Suffolk probate court where she won separate support from her husband. Judge William M. Prest awarded her $12 a week and $15 expenses to be paid within 30 days. They have no children.

Called to the witness stand by Atty. Clarence W. Rowley, her counsel, Mrs. Van Auken testified to the steady drinking of her husband and his cruelty when under the influence.

Mrs. Van Auken admitted that she would return to her husband if he stopped drinking, but she was afraid he would get drunk again and kill her.

U. S. JOINS BABY KIDNAP HUNT

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—Federal agents were called today to help hunt for Baby Patricia Luciano, called the youngest kidnapping victim on record here.

The child, only 23 days old, was taken from her home yesterday by a mysterious, well-dressed woman who told her mother, Mrs. Mary Luciano, that she would take the infant to the Home Relief Bureau to the outfitted with clothes.

Mother's Suit to Be Changed for Children

Mrs. Margaret E. Stuart of King st., Lynn, widow of Frank C. Stuart, leather merchant, erred in bringing a suit as guardian of her three children to recover $23,000 of $55,364.56 which she invested for them with Halsey Stuart & Co., Inc., it was ruled b Judge Elisha H. Brewster in Federal Court today.

"I thing this suit should be brought in the name of the minors rather than in the name of the guardian," said Judge Brewster in closing the case, arguments of which will be made January 23. H. D. Linscott, counsel for Mrs. Stuart, announced that he would amend the suit so as to meet requirements suggested.

Roosevelt's Son Is on Harvard Book Staff

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., was appointed chairman of the business board of the Freshman Red Book at Harvard yesterday by C. Colroy Gibson, editor-in-chief. Other board chairmen named were Leavitt Sargent White of Plainfield, N. J., editorial; John Bradford Bowditch of Concord, photographic; and Arnett McKennan of Boston, art.

The board is making plans for a more elaborate annual than those turned out in the past and it will include etchings of the buildings in the Yard.

Fireworks Win Separation!

There were plenty of fireworks the night before the Fourth, testified Mrs. Anna S. Van Auken of Quincy. Among other things her husband pushed her through a French door, crippling her arm. Today she was granted separate support—$12 a week. (Boston American photo.)

BRUINS WANT PROBE HERE

President Charles F. Adams of the Boston Bruins today wired Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, requesting that the special meeting of the Board of Governors to hear the appeal of the Toronto Club in the Shore-Bailey case to be held in Boston.

Adams said Boston was the proper place to reopen the controversy so witnesses might appear without incurring expense to the league.

He attacked the motives behind Connie Smythe's appeal from the recent decision of Frank Patrick, managing director.

Eddie Shore is Boston-bound after a vacation in Bermuda. He will be in New York on Friday.

U. S. ASKED TO GUARANTEE 4 BILLION OF LIENS

Urges Congress to Give Obligations Full Backing

Washington, Jan. 10 (INS)—President Roosevelt today asked Congress to put full governmental backing behind $2,000,000,000 of farm credit bonds.

Also, in a conference with Chairman John H. Fahey of the Home Loan Board, he agreed that the $2,000,000,000 in home loan bonds should be treated on a basis of substantial equality with the farm mortgage bonds.

A recommendation on methods of providing some form of government guarantee is now being prepared, but today's message did not deal with this.

The present law guarantees the interest on the bonds, but does not guarantee the principal, and because of that fact the market for them has been adversely affected.

However, the President asserted the government has a "moral responsibility" to back up the principal of the bonds, as well as to guarantee the interest.

He pointed out that the additional guaranty would put the farm credit bonds on a par with other Treasury securities, and permit the continued refinancing of farm indebtedness on virtually a self-sustaining basis.

TEXT OF MESSAGE

"To the Congress:

"I have already suggested to the Congress that one of our tasks, in the light of experience, is to improve and perfect previous legislation.

"I now recommend that the Emergency Farm Credit Act of 1933 be amended to provide responsibility by the Government for the payment of the principal of, as well as interest on, bonds issued.

"Two billion dollars of bonds were authorized. While the interest was guaranteed, the ultimate obligation of the government for payment of the principal was not legally assumed.

"We should supplement what

U. S. SALES TAX WINS SUPPORT OF N. E. COUNCIL MEMBERS

INCOME LEVY DRAWS FIRE OF MANY BUSINESS LEADERS

Retail Trade Board Committee Will Make Study of Whole Situation; Movement Gains Momentum

The nation-wide drive, designed to eliminate federal income tax laws and to substitute a manufacturers' sales tax to raise revenue for government expenditures, penetrated New England today.

After a meeting of the Retail Trade Board of the Chamber of Commerce a committee was appointed to investigate the manufacturers' sales tax plan and today the committee will take up the study of the program.

COUNCIL FAVORS

Meanwhile the New England Council, representing business and industry throughout the six states, has gone on record, through a poll of its members, in favor of the plan.

The idea of the manufacturers' sales tax to replace the income tax was first broached in the Hearst newspapers, and today, 27 Hearst newspapers throughout the country are carrying on a campaign to interest their readers in this program and to bring the matter to the attention of Congress.

Rep. John W. McCormack, of Boston, has drafted a bill which calls for a manufacturers' sales tax. It will be introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington. Sen. David I. Walsh has expressed himself as sympathetic to this idea. Rep. McCormack is a member of the House ways and means committee.

MOVEMENT SPREADS

Throughout the country the movement is fast spreading for the elimination of the income taxes in favor of the manufacturers' sales tax. Chambers of commerce, trade boards and business organizations are combining to make an intensive drive on Congress during this the present session for legislation to effect this change.

In some states, notably California, state-wide committees are being formed, designed to take this message into every home in the state.

Business men and economists are outspoken in their denunciation of the national income tax which, they claim, is easily evaded by the rich and the burden of which is forced on the man of moderate means.

Many keen students of governmental problems claim that the elimination of the income taxes and the substitution of a manufacturers' sales tax would go a long way toward solving many of the financial worries of the country.

President Roosevelt, it is understood, would be favorable to a plan for the introduction of the manufacturers' sales tax to replace the income tax.

BITTER CRITICISM

Criticism of the income tax laws, which has been growing more bitter for years, is now outspoken throughout the country. The income tax laws, it is now freely admitted, are so framed and administered that it is possible for the rich, through the employment of tax attorneys to evade and sidestep their responsibilities, which throws the burden of the payment of tax upon the man of moderate means who, although being less able to pay, is forced to carry most of the load.

With the country facing a deficit in the present fiscal year of seven thousand millions of dollars, economists realize that economizing must be done, not only to relieve the average man of this burden, but to secure greater income for government. The manufacturers' sales tax is considered as the logical solution to this problem.

The manufacturers' sales tax has been called by Sen. David I. Walsh "the most painless tax."

It is urged that this form of taxation, eliminating clothing and food and some other essentials, would be the easiest to collect, and the least irksome form of levy possible.

HEARST'S G.O.P. PLAN LAUDED

New York, Jan. 10—The proposals suggested editorially by Mr. William Randolph Hearst as a "patriotic program for the Republican party" were praised last night by Dr. Charles Fleischer in his nightly broadcast, "More Than News," over WMCA.

Terming the program "a collection of practical principles upon whose embodiment in legislation and in general practice all Americans might well unite," Dr. Fleischer said:

"I ask you to recognize the program as a sample of that self-respecting, forceful Americanism that Mr. Hearst, through his farflung publications, has always fostered."

Prof. Murray's Son Fined in Auto Case

David Hill Murray, 21, a Harvard janitor and son of Prof. John T. Murray of the Harvard English department, was fined $50 today in East Cambridge court on a charge of operating a auto while under the influence of liquor.

He appealed and was held in $100. On a charge of having no license in his possession he was fined $5, and paid. A charge of having no registration in his possession was placed on file.

35 Homeless When Blaze Sweeps South End Block

Roaring through a six-story brick apartment block at Washington and Camden sts., South End early today, a three-alarm fire endangered the congested lodging house district, left 35 persons homeless and caused damaged estimated at $12,000.

Many of the occupants, largely women and children, were rescued by police and firemen, after a number had suffered from smoke inhalation.

Clad only in nightclothing, the occupants were cared for at Warren ave. and Roxbury Crossing police stations.

The fire, the cause of which is under investigation, started on the roof where, police said, roofers had been working yesterday.

When Chief Henry Fox reached the scene he ordered a second alarm, to be followed in a few minutes by a third.

In a short time the entire building was ablaze, with frightened occupants in nightclothing running to the street or being carried out by rescuers.

The structure, numbered from 1819 to 1831 Washington st., is occupied on the first floor by stores. The upper stories are known as the Laurel Apartments

Albert McDonald, asleep on the third floor, was awakened by the crackling flames. He aroused his wife, Helena, and their three children, Francis, 5½; Betty, 4, and Eleanor, 2.

Firemen rescued Mrs. Margaret Doyle, an elderly woman living on the second floor. Going to the assistance of Mrs. Pearl Tait, 70, into whose room flames had already penetrated, the rescuers were told she must save her dogs.

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—The President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Sr., will arrive at the White House tonight, to be a guest there and to attend the diplomatic dinner tomorrow night.

20,000 ARM FOR ANTI-NAZI WAR

Vienna, Jan. 10 (AP)—Upwards of 20,000 Fascist Heimwehrmen under arms in Austria were ready to back Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss in a "once and for all" drive against the Nazis.

There was, however, one condition—that Heimwehr leaders was assured by Dollfuss he will establish a purely Fascist regime.

Austrian socialists, and party politics in general, must leave Austria with the Nazis, these Heimwehr (Home Guards) leaders emphasized at a conference in which they expressed approval of the anti-Nazi campaign Dollfuss has demanded.

If the five-foot fighting chancellor can satisfy the Heimwehrmen today that he has made up his mind to throw all political parties overboard, including the Christian Socialists as well as the Socialists, they will follow him enthusiastically, they said.

If not, there may be further complications, it was intimated. Adding emphasis to Nazi defiance of the government's forceful stand, bombs allegedly touched off by Nazis, exploded in the capital and many other cities during the night.

New York, Jan. 10 — Maurice Chevalier, French stage and screen star, arrived here after a three months' vacation in England and France. He will start work soon in "The Merry Widow," his first picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

SINKING FUNDS TO AID RAILS

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt strongly favors the establishment by railroads and utility companies of sinking funds to pay of ftheir mortgage indebtedness.

The President feels that if the carriers had been reducing their bonded indebtedness they would have avoided the serious threat of bankruptcy which faced some major lines last spring.

At the same time, he thinks the Interstate Commerce Commission and other regulatory agencies should take into account the attempt of the roads to pay off their mortgage debts by allowing sufficient earnings to meet their requirements.

It was disclosed today at the White House that one of the largest roads in the country was faced with receivership last March.

Yale Youths Freed of "Suspicious" Act

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 10 (AP)—Three Yale freshmen, taken to headquarters by a patrolman, who said they were "acting suspiciously," were released today after questioning. They had been taken into custody near a liquor store, the owner of which had asked that a close watch be kept on the premises. Police said no charges were preferred against the Yale men.

VETS' PAY BILLS CUT BY 265 MILLIONS

Congress Faces Fight Over U. S. Salary Reductions

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—The appropriations committee asked the House today to appropriate $566,430,000 to finance 16 independent federal agencies for the next fiscal year. The committee estimated savings in veterans expenditures, made under the economy act, at $265,000,000.

It appended to the independent offices appropriation bill provisions to extend the economy act, estimating that these would result in a "saving" of $160,000,000 in the whole budget next year.

The first appropriations bill reported this session, the measure carried the smallest request for ex-service men in many years. Also it provided for extending the Economy Act and 10 per cent pay cut for government workers for another fiscal year.

REPUBLICANS PLAN ATTACK

Both Democratic and Republican leaders agreed it would cause stormy sessions when called up tomorrow for first debate.

Republicans plan to work against the pay cut and will have some support from Democrats.

The Veterans' Bureau appropriation request was cut to $7,000,000 less than the budget estimates of $553,210,000, which were $9,627,909 less than appropriations for this fiscal year.

Appropriations for the bureau in the current year amounted to $602,838,000, compared with $848,-800,418 in 1933, indicating a saving of $335,962,418, largely through the economy act.

100,000 VETS DROPPED

At hearings before a sub-committee headed by Representative Woodrum (D.) of Virginia, it was developed from Brig.-Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, that 100,000 veterans had been dropped from the presumptive rolls under the economy act.

Of veterans remaining, Hines said, 42.78 per cent were permitted to stay on the rolls by the review boards. The others are appealing their cases before the appeals tribunals set up by the President.

In discussions of the forthcoming attack on the federal pay cut section, it was disclosed that Chairman Buchanan of the appropriations committee was likely in reserve a letter to him from the President reporting that a just-completed survey of living costs would make unjustifiable full restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut ordered a year ago.

3 BOSTON MEN FACE ARREST IN AUTO FRAUD

N. H. Prosecutor Says He Will Bare Inner Secrets of Ring

Revelations of the workings of the alleged New Hampshire insurance fraud ring continued today, as authorities planned more Boston arrests in addition to five which included a policeman's wife.

County Solicitor John J. Sheehan of Manchester, N. H., said that at least three more arrests will take place in Boston, two of the persons being former insurance adjusters.

Two of the seven, Mrs. Margaret Griffin, 25-year-old attractive blonde wife of a Boston policeman, and Arthur T. Wood, former bail commissioner and master in chancery, both of West Roxbury, were arraigned in Manchester today.

Both waived reading of the complaint, which charged them with larcenies. They pleaded not guilty and were remanded to Hillsborough County jail in default of bail. Mrs. Griffin was held in $1000, Wood in $5000.

Wood's brother, Warren, his wife Mary E., faced municipal court in Boston yesterday charged with being fugitive from justice in connection with the insurance ring's activities.

Raymond Femino of Roslindale was also arrested.

Warren Wood and Femino declined to accompany the sheriff, and were held for a hearing Jan. 10. According to Sheriff Down, Wood was the "brains" of the group and Femino his chief lieutenant. He said Wood will be accused of obtaining at least $15,000 from insurance companies. Mrs. Woods promised she will go to New Hampshire voluntarily today for arraignment if necessary.

Awaiting action by the grand jury in New Hampshire are Donald R. Hodgson, an insurance adjuster, went to Manchester two years ago from Boston, and Charles Peterson of Taylor st., Manchester.

SPEEDY PASSAGE URGED

"By setting up a corporation to issue these bonds, the important task of refinancing agricultural indebtedness can be continued on virtually a self-sustaining basis.

"The Farm Credit Administration is expediting the disbursement of funds. In order that progress in making loans may be uninterrupted, I hope that the Congress will give attention to this subject as soon as possible.

"It is true that technically the responsibilities of the government will be increased by the amount of $2,000,000,000, but it seems in every way right that we thus publicly acknowledge what amounts already to a moral obligation.

"In any event, the securities to be offered are backed, not only by the credit of the government, but also by physical property of very definite value."

BUDGET REQUEST

The President, it was announced, expects to submit shortly to Congress a request for an $1,168,000,000 additional appropriation to complete the budget for the current year.

Out of this, he expects to obtain funds necessary to continue the Civil Works Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Meanwhile, he said today at the White House, a final decision has not been reached on the allocation of the $2,000,000,000 emergency recovery fund he has proposed for next year.

Money for the reconstruction corporation and the public works administration will come out of the recovery fund.

Father of 2 Jailed in Extortion Plot

Philadelphia, Jan. 10—Pleading guilty to charges of writing three letters demanding $30,000 on penalty of death from Lessing J. Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., William F. Schultze, penniless father of two children, today was sentenced to from five to 15 years in Eastern Penitentiary.

Widow of Chelsea Mayor Dies at 65

Mrs. Catherine H. Breath, 65, widow of the late Melvin L. Breath, one-time representative from Chelsea, died at her Chelsea home following a lingering illness.

Funeral services will be held Friday with a solemn funeral mass at St. Rose's Church, Chelsea.

Against Her Will

Mrs. Thalia Massie paused in Chicago on her way to Reno to get a divorce to repeat that she was seeking the separation only because her husband, Lieut. Thomas Massie, U. S. N., insisted. She was the central figure of the attack case that shattered the calm of Hawaii in 1931.

R.F.C. INCREASE HAS APPROVAL

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—Jesse H. Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, told the House banking committee today that President Roosevelt was willing to accept the Senate banking committee's plan to extend the RFC for one year and increase its capitalization by $800,000,000.

Jones said the question of making RFC securities eligible for rediscount at Federal Reserve banks was one for the committee to decide since "it doesn't make a particle of difference to the RFC."

He expressed doubt as to the advisability of permitting the RFC to make direct loans to industry, holding that small industries could obtain loans from banks and mortgage companies under already established procedure.

Liquor 'Ads' in Dry States Under Ban

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Senate today adopted an amendment to the liquor tax bill to permit newspapers and periodicals carrying liquor advertisements to circulate in dry states.

HULTMAN ASKS RADIO BIDS

Bids for installation of the long-delayed two-way police radio in Boston were invited today by Police Commissioner Hultman.

The commissioner set 12 noon January 29 as the deadline for receiving of sealed proposals and announced that specifications and the form of proposal are available at the offices of Jackson & Moreland, engineer, who made the radio survey for the police.

Proposals, the invitation said, must be accompanied by a certified check for $5000 made out in the name of the commissioner, and the successful bidder will be required to furnish a bond for an amount equal to the total contract price.

Social Club to Dance

The Jamaica Plain Civic Club will hold its annual dance in the Mary E. Curley School, Canter and Pershing rds. on Monday evening, January 15, 1934.

CWA PROBE TO STRIKE AT HIGHER-UPS

Big Politicians Try to Cover Up Graft in Many Cities

"Big shot politicians," grafting on CWA workers, scurried for cover today in Somerville, Beverly, Fall River and other cities and towns where irregularities have been uncovered by Department of Justice agents working with CWA officials.

The lightning is due to strike again in Somerville, where yesterday 25 men were discharged for incompetence.

This time it will strike at the source responsible for the hiring of these men.

Chairman Joseph W. Bartlett, Director John J. Power, and the department of justice agents held a long secret conference today at the CWA headquarters to map this action.

WIDESPREAD GRAFTING

It was also learned that the report on grafting in Beverly has been completed, and will probably be made public in a day or two.

Fall River and Long Island are next on the list. After them will follow other localities where complaints have been investigated.

In addition to levying tribute on workers after they were employed on CWA projects, it was learned that one Somerville politician had lined up men before they were even given jobs and demanded tribute for considering their applications.

Complaints showed persons engaged in gainful businesses giving up their occupations temporarily to take CWA jobs. In such cases they would turn the business over to another member of their family, it was reported.

HIGH PAY, USELESS JOBS

Instances were reported where timekeepers were employed at $1.50 an hour to check crews of only three or four workers.

Director Power has turned over to Department of Justice agents complaints that Long Island the highest paid workers are loafing, and that payrolls contain names of many unskilled laborers listed as skilled workers.

In addition he has sent information to the U. S. Department of Justice concerning two other men, one a timekeeper who was being paid $1,800 a year as a bribe by an incompetent man, employed as a painter at $1.50 an hour.

Nazis Guillotine Youth Who Fired Reichstag

Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 10 (INS) —Moving so suddenly as to take even high government officials by surprise, the Hitler government today executed Marinus Van Der Lubbe, young Dutch radical convicted of setting fire to the Reichstag building.

Van Der Lubbe was beheaded on the guillotine in the yard of the Leipzig Superior court at 7:30 a. m. Great secrecy surrounded the execution.

Van Der Lubbe

The guillotine was employed instead of the oft-threatened hanging, or the orthodox Nazi axe-man, because it is the legal method of execution in the Province of Saxony, in which Leipzig lies.

The Nazi headquarters later explained from Berlin that Van Der Lubbe was guillotined because he was regarded as having committed the crime from his own convictions. Nevertheless, it was said, beheading in this case should not be interpreted as a milder form of execution.

No small part of the surprise occasioned by the swift move was due to the fact that Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, had hinted through the Dutch minister to Berlin that clemency for her young national would be welcome.

There was no representative of the Netherlands government at the execution, and there were no journalists present. There were 12 witnesses, all citizens of Leipzig, appointed by the burgomaster, and a few court officials.

Van Der Lubbe, an enigma throughout the famous trial at which he received his death sentence, died without benefit of clergy, having persistently declined the assistance of any church representative.

5 Lost Newton Boys Wire for Carfares Home

The five Newton high school boys, who ran away because they feared parental action on their poor report cards, were accounted for today. Three are in Louisville, Ga., and two in Mamaroneck, N. Y. They are all ready to return home—even anxious—despite doubts about the welcome awaiting them.

The fathers of the trio in Georgia put one over on their sons. Instead of sending $20, each requested, they told police to put the lads on a New York boat and made arrangements with the line for transportation. They took no chances that their sons would continue their wanderings with new funds.

The trio, which started the epidemic of disappearances, consists of Robert Howley, 17, of Rowena rd., son of a United Fruit Co. agent, and George W. Young, Jr., 17, of Centre st., son of a prominent decorator and builder, and John Noble, 15, of 14 Applegarth rd.

Young's father received the following telegram from him:

"We want to come home. Please send $20 and notify other fathers."

Marcel Orleans, Jr., 18, of Auburn st., Auburndale, notified his father, by means of a postcard, that he is staying with relatives in Mamaroneck and that he will return Friday. He did not mention John Ham, 16, of Watertown st., West Newton, who vanished with him, but it is believed they are together.

COURT HALTS EVICTION SO COUPLE CAN GET HOME LOAN

SON GIVES BOND TO AID FIGHT OF PARENTS

Boston Co-operative Refused New Security on Atlantic House

At least Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pratt will have another week to remain in their home in Bayfield rd, Atlantic—but then again they will face eviction.

In Quincy court today, Judge Kenneth Nash allowed the aged couple another week before taking action on the attempt of the Boston Co-operative Bank to have Mr. and Mrs. Pratt evicted because hard times, the bank and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation don't mesh.

It was agreed by Charles A. Robbins, a stepson, who represented the couple, that a bond of $500 would be posted during the continuance.

Seven years ago Mr. Pratt, who went to work on the Newton Journal 64 years ago, bought the home in Bayfield st., paying $7000 for it, with $4700 of this represented by a first mortgage held by the Boston Co-operative Bank.

Eventually Mr. Pratt reduced the mortgage to $3400, despite the growing leanness of the years. Finally, however, with the Journal not doing so well and with income fallen off dismally, he was unable to pay any more and he lapsed the payment of interest and taxes.

Then the Home Owners' Loan Corporation came into being and Mr. Pratt believed his troubles were solved. The Home Loan Bank would take over the mortgage, give the Boston Co-operative Bank good government bonds in return and then Mr. and Mrs. Pratt would have a new lease of life.

But they reckoned without the Boston Co-operative Bank, because the bank spurned the bonds and the deal and insisted on going after a writ of eviction.

Tragic Trail

Tragedy continues to trail Kate Pullman. Shunned by the theatrical world after she bore Roscoe Ails a eugenic son, with engagements few, her woe cup was filled when her dancing partner was killed on the Ayer road and she and her son injured when their auto crashed. (Boston American photo.)

KATE PULLMAN AND EUGENIC SON HURT

Dancer's Stage Partner Meets Death in Ayer Auto Tragedy

Misfortune, which has dogged the footsteps of Kate Pullman, vaudeville performer, since the birth of her eugenic baby, has caught up with her again.

She is in a hospital at Ayer with her young son, who is in a serious condition, while her dancing partner, Jack McCluskey, lies in a morgue.

The trio, on their way from Montreal to Boston to fill an engagement, were involved in an auto accident. McCluskey's car collided with a truck at Gilson's Corner on the Ayer-Littleton road.

The actor was instantly killed. Miss Pullman and her son, Roscoe Ails, 5, whose birth attracted nation-wide attention, were taken to the Community Memorial Hospital. The boy suffered head injuries and concussion of the brain. His name is on the danger list. His mother also suffered head injuries and a broken knuckle.

To Kate Pullman this is the latest and worst blow that fate has dealt her since she astounded the theatrical world by announcing she was going to bear a eugenic baby.

The father was Roscoe Ails, an actor who was Kate's whole life for years. She declared herself to be proud and happy to be mother of his child, but after the baby was born came disillusionment. The public frowned and Kate was unable to get engagements. Ails supported the baby for a time, but then he married Shirley Dahlman, also in the profession, and they had a child of their own.

Slaying May Unite Family

Although an underworld aura has been placed around Louise Brooks, Vanities beauty, and former South End girl, her mother remains loyal to her daughter, from whom she has not heard in two years. The gang murder of Frank Schaeffer, notorious convict, and the wounding of David Bachrach, as they walked Broadway, gave Mrs. Brooks the first clue of her daughter. She believes that Bachrach is the husband of her daughter. New York police have partially confirmed her suspicions. (Boston American photo.)

LIBBY CROONS TO BABY BOY ON BIRTHDAY

Singer 'Party' Host on Smith Reynolds' First Anniversary

New York, Jan. 10 — Libby Holman, erstwhile torch singer, will sing a song today, and not a blue song.

It will be a simple heart song, the song of a fond mother crooning to her first born, with an added note of gayety for Smith Reynolds will be just a year old.

At any rate Libby's many guests will be gay, for the widow of Smith Reynolds, young tobacco scion, will be hostess at a birthday party.

Clifton Webb, former dance partner and now starring in "As Thousands Cheer," said Libby had reminded all her friends of the anniversary, recalling the time when she first saw her tiny son and heir to the tobacco millions. But the celebration is not in New York, Webb said:

"I wouldn't say where it is. They are not in the city now."

Libby guards her baby from publicity and the kidnaping racket, her theater friends say. She even left the Philadelphia Hospital secretly last year, nine weeks after the birth of her two-pound-seven-ounce son. For three weeks the infant was kept in a modified incubator. The mother maintained similar privacy during the summer and fall when she lived on a Watch Hill, R. I., estate, with a special bodyguard and a Dalmatian dog for safety.

Libby Celebrates

Smith Reynolds, Jr., made his world debut a year ago today. His mother, Torch Singing Libby Holman, will give a party for her theatrical friends to celebrate the first anniversary of the baby whose millionaire father was slain before his son was born. (International News Photos.)

BROKER'S WIFE SURRENDERS TO CLAIRE

Heart Balm Claimant Agrees to New Trial With Actress

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (US)—Appeal from the court ruling ordering a new trial in the sensational $100,000 love theft suit of Mrs. Marion Y. Read, Oakland matron, against Claire Windsor, blonde film actress, will not be taken, it has been announced by William M. Byrne, who was associated with Atty. Walter J. Little in the case for Mrs. Read. Mrs. Read was awarded $75,000 by a jury last Sept. 14. She had accused the film actress of stealing the affections of her broker-husband, Alfred C. Read.

"Since the court held the judgment of $75,000 for Mrs. Read was too high, but declined to set an amount in view of the circumstances, we are willing to retry the case," Byrne declared. "We will not appeal from the court's case ordering a new trial, because we believe a new hearing will be speedier and less costly."

LYNN TO SPEED MURDER CASE

Speed in the indictment and trial of the two Brighton taxicab drivers, jailed for the Lynn Paramount theater murder, was the goal of authorities today.

Since Gov. Ely made his plea to fight against crime, Lynn has been a leader in that war, and one burglar suspect was shot down by a Lynn policeman.

Today Chief Inspector William H. Kane said that the theater murder case would go to the Essex county grand jury tomorrow.

He further said that he would demand an early trial. His aim is to have Clement Molway and Louis Berrett, the men under arrest, tried in the present term of court.

Importance of two girls, said to be sweethearts of Molway and Berrett, waned today, according to Insp. Kane. He said that while one of them told a story inconsistent with that of Molway, he regarded it as of slight import.

Witnesses to the holdup and murder at the theater will view the photograph of taxi driver John McMannon, whose mangled body was found on the railroad tracks in Boston the day after the murder. Police think that McMannon might have been the third in the bandit trio.

CWA JUGGLING HOLDS UP PAY

More confusion in the handling CWA payrolls on Boston projects, affecting 1300 workers, is anticipated owing to unauthorized reclassification of the workers by timekeepers and supervisors, it was learned today. Their pay, it is said, will be delayed as a result.

In many cases, it was learned, the supervisors have been transferring men from job to job, reducing or increasing the rate of pay, with a resultant confusion in the payroll division.

The changing of records necessitated by these changes, which are unauthorized, has created a situation where pay days will be delayed, it is reported.

Food Prices Decline

Washington, Jan. 10—The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports retail food prices dropped approximately one and one-half per cent for the fortnight ended December 15.

CHICAGO MILK STRIKE ENDED

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Chicago milk blockade was ended today on a truce reached between warring factions in a conference with Mayo Edward J. Kelly.

The mayor announced milk deliveries would be resumed this afternoon after five days of violence that had left Chicago almost milkless.

GANDHI'S GIRL WANTS A HOME

Calcutta, India, Jan. 10 (INS)—The American consulate today looked about for a suitable home for Nila Cram Cook, young American girl, daughter of a Greenwich Village poet, who recently abandoned the ranks of Mahatma Gandhi's followers for a "life of thrills."

Nila Cram Cook.

Her search for thrilling adventure soon brought her here, where she was lodged in a hospital for mental observation. Now pronounced normal, she was ordered discharged today. She is destitute.

LIFER NOT USED IN DALY TRIAL

John A. Bowen, 21, State Prison lifer counted on as the government's star witnes against John T. Daly, 20, his chum, was taken to Dedham Superior Court today, but did not testify at Daly's trial for the murder of Harry "Pop" Riddell, Atlantic baker.

Failure of the government to call him after a long recess and a conference in judge's chambers was a mystery.

At Daly's first trial, which ended in a disagreement, Bowen turned state's evidence and testified he struck Riddell in his shop during a robbery while Daly was looting the cash till. After the disagreement, Bowen was permitted to plead guilty to second degree murder but Daly is still charged with murder in the first degree.

Bowen was aiken from prison across the city by a deputy warden early this morning but when trial finally resumed this afternoon he was not called and Lieut. George Fallon of Quincy, who testified yesterday, was taken under cross-examination by Leo P. Doherty, Daly's counsel.

Judge Nelson P. Brown is trying to complete the case by Friday.

CARDINAL STOPS OVER IN N. Y.

New York, Jan. 10 (INS)—William Cardinal O'Connell, was a guest in New York for a few hours today.

He arrived from Boston, on the Eastern liner Acadia early today and went at once to the Hotel St. Regis, accompanied by Mons. Splaine and Fr. Coppinger.

Later he was to sail for Nassau, where he usually spends his winters.

The Cardinal asked to be excused from interviews.

Shoe Sales Up

St. Louis, Jan. 10—Eastern manufacturers here to attend the annual convention of the National Shoe Retailers' Association reported sales increases ranging up to 50 per cent over a year ago.

Advertising Man Dies

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Neville E. Wrinn, 25, of New Haven, Ct., died today of complications that followed an appendectomy. For six years he had been an advertising man on the Mt. Vernon Daily Argus.

N. Y. Killing Mother's Clue to So. End Daughter

The New York shooting, in which Frank Schaeffer, comrade of Gerald Chapman in an escape from Atlanta penitentiary, was slain, may unite a Boston mother with the daughter she has not seen for nearly two years, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The mother, Mrs. Ethel Brooks, of Tremont st., South End, communicated with the Boston Evening American today in an effort to learn whether David Bachrach, who was wounded by the bullets which killed Schaeffer, was the same man her daughter married.

Bachrach, whose wounds are slight, is being held by New York police on a charge of consorting with a criminal. He will be placed in the lineup at New York police headquarters today.

According to the story told by Mrs. Brooks, she objected to her daughter, Louise Brooks, former Vanities showgirl, keeping company with an alleged gangster, David Bachrach, two years ago. As a result, she said, her daughter married Bachrach and the pair disappeared.

Realizing that the marriage had taken place, she finally began a search for her daughter in order that they might be reunited. She was unsuccessful in her hunt and her first glimmer of hope came with the published reports a David Bachrach had been wounded in the Schaeffer shooting.

Police at the 13th Precinct, New York, when questioned early today about this angle of Bachrach's case, expressed belief he was the same man. Mrs. Brooks has wired a request that they make the identification positive.

"I don't care if he is a gunman or a gangster," she said today. "All I care about is my daughter's happiness. If she loves him he can be anything he wants to be. And if the man under arrest in New York is my daughter's husband, I will do everything I can to help him. I will even get together what money he needs for his defense."

'SCHOOL LOBBY' CALLED PERIL BY BOARD

A scathing denunciation of the "school teachers' lobby" is contained in the final section of the report of the Special Commission on Public Expenditures, better known as the Wragg Commission.

Unless politics are eliminated, businesslike methods applied, appointments of teachers made on the merit system, and non-essentials weeded out of education, the commission says, the day will come in Massachusetts "when pupils will have to be dismissed for indefinite periods and the windows of our school buildings boarded up as is already the case in many of the schools of other states."

CUT IN COSTS DEMANDED

In addition to its demand for greatly lowered school costs that will not be at the expense of the child, the commission recommended:

1. Increased tuition fees at State College, all the nine state teachers' colleges and at the Massachusetts Art School.

2. Abolition of the county training schools.

3, A. stop to reimbursement of cities and towns for money spent for adult instruction in the use of the English language.

4. Reduction in state reimbursement to small towns for the cost of transportation of high school pupils.

5. Optional rather than mandatory courses in manual training and household arts in municipalities of more than 29,000 population.

MORE FUNDS NEEDED

Use of state highway funds for general purposes as was done a year ago, or distribution of a portion of the fund to cities and towns as was done two years ago, was favored by the commission.

From its survey of probable revenue and expenses, the commission said, much more than the $8,000,000 diverted to keep the state tax to $9,000,000 last year will be needed to meet the impending deficit.

The diversions are proposed as an alternate to a retail sales tax, as suggested by Governor Ely. However, the commission remarked that a combination of both the sales tax and the diversion might be affected.

Other general recommendations of the commission included:

An investigation of the state military department by the commission on administration and finance for the purpose of reducing expenses in that department.

Abolition of the division of metropolitan planning.

Payment of all fines imposed for automobile violations to treasuries of counties where they are assessed, instead of into the state highway fund.

Pre-qualifications for all applicants for motor vehicle registration to avoid fraudulent registration through false names and addresses.

6 NAVY PLANES IN HAWAII HOP

San Francisco, Jan. 10 (AP) — Six huge Navy seaplanes poised here today for a hop at noon across 2150 nautical miles of the open Pacific to Honolulu—longest and most hazardous over-water formation flight ever attempted.

The takeoff was definitely set for 12 o'clock (Pacific time) by Lieut.-Com. Kneffler McGinnis, squadron leader, so that his command might take the earliest possible advantage of existing favorable weather conditions.

Beyond Hawaii a storm was blowing up, but between Honolulu and the mainland the sea was "smooth as glass."

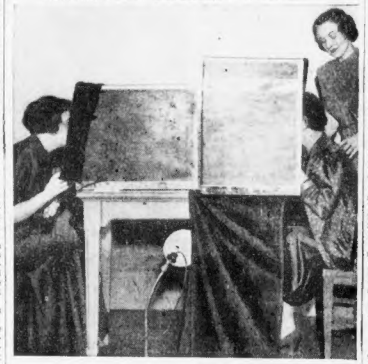
Beauty Lens Bares Secrets

HOW BEAUTY IS DISTORTED BY DERMALENS



CAMERA BARES SECRETS OF WOMAN'S FACE

Miss Ruth Mugglebee, Boston Evening American staff writer,, saw herself under the dermalens—something few other women have ever done—and she got the shock of her life. The dermalens shows one distorted out of all proportion and it penetrates the cosmetics and reveals the true skin to the eye. Peering through the lens at Miss Mugglebee is Miss Helen Ecclestone, while Miss Harriet Groves calms the patient.

New Beauty Sleuth Detects Slightest Skin Defects

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Since a woman's face is her fortune, cosmeticians are now reading the fortune of woman's face. A paradox but scientifically true. To achieve that "skin you love to touch," for which women yearn, along comes the cosmetician with another device to remind us that all that glitters around our eyes and mouth is not so much dermatological crystal but a power cover-up.

And is that terrible?

You should really know.

MARTYR TO BEAUTY

Like all you "divine ladies," I, too, cherished a secret passion to challenge some day the beauty expert with a glowing, beautiful skin that would send her into a seventh heaven of ecstacy.

But my illusion yesterday became a disillusion and today I write—I could sing—my minor plaint as an obligato of warning to your cosmetic melody.

We have in our midst, ladies, an evil-looking contraption of sinister proportions, which, like the mouth of a yawning gulf hiding behind black velvet curtains, can hold your head. And there in an aurora of light playing on all the wrinkles you have so valiantly tried to hide, is released the pigment coloring of your skin to acquaint the connoisseur of that "skin you love to touch" business with all the skin skeletons that have suddenly come out of hiding.

The derma-lens stands today as the newest wrinkle in skin defect detection. It neither lies, covers up, nor camouflages.

This machine—an enlarged lens and a strong light, delves through the cosmetic appliances and powder applications on your skin to the very depths, to tell you the condition of your skin.

All those blemishes you've tried to hide by powder become apparent to the naked eye.

Or perhaps your skin is normal, but your choice of cosmetics is wrong. Well the machine, like a ouija board, sees all and knows all and the girl who operates it, tells you all.

Take me for instance. By nature, I am a brunette with the exotic allure of an olive-skinned damsel; that is, if I believe Miss Harriet Groves who read my face fortune. And what a ticket she handed me.

MECCA FOR WOMEN

In reality it was yellow and it meant, after she had played the derma-lens on my face, the distortion of which now confronts you hideously like a female Frankenstein elsewhere on the page (please don't trust photographs) that for my particular brunette coloring and skin pigment, a dark face powder was not only necessary but requisite.

Both Miss Groves and Miss Helen Ecclestone, special representatives for Madame Helena Rubenstein, cosmetician, now introducing the derma-lens to beauty-loving women at a Boston department store, have become the crystal-gazers of the skin.

RUSSO-JAP WAR SEEN IN EAST

Tokyo, Jan. 10 (INS)—Apparently in preparation for hostilities with Soviet Russia, Japan is secretly organizing a new, independent army corps of infantry, it was learned today.

The new army corps will consist of several regular-strength divisions. This presumably would increase Japan's man-power on active duty by at least 50,000. The new troops would be conscripts who would serve two years.

Simultaneously, the army is painstakingly concentrating on improving anti-gas masks and cold-resistance uniforms, and in adopting a new style of machine gun. The present equipment is regarded as not sufficiently effective for a campaign in sub-zero weather.

The figure of 50,000 men for the size of the new army corps is based on the minimum peace-time strength of a corps of several divisions.

PEGGY SUED FOR RICH RAIMENT

New York, Jan. 10—Filmy underthings, black velvet pajamas and gorgeous gowns that bore such snappy titles as "That Certain Thing," "Flamingo," "Any Time" and "You Know," have brought Peggy Hopkins Joyce into the tangles of the courts, where beauteous Peggy is no stranger.

Owing to Peggys roving habits, Municipal Court Justice Myron Sulzberger ordered papers served on the bell-captain of the Waldorf-Astoria, where Peggy lives, when she's home. The suit is brought by Mme. Frances, Inc., from which firm Peggy bought apparel worth $2370 in 1930 and 1931, and paid all but $495 worth, it is charged.

Max Samuels, process server, said he tried seven times to serve blonde Miss Joyce, but was told by her secretary that she was "out of town," and wouldn't see him anyway.

Youth on Bail in Beauty Kidnaping

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 10 (INS)—George V. Cooper, Jr., son of a wealthy New Rochelle family, was released today in $3500 bail to await trial on charges of kidnaping two artists models last March.

The young man's arraignment followed his release from a state hospital for mental patients where he has been undergoing treatment. Mary Louise Harper and Louise Prentiss Groothoff made the charges. In answer to ads they sent to Cooper's home where he held them prisoner for several hours but did not harm them.

20 on Trial in Bulgaria

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 10—The trial of two officers, 20 non-commissioned officers, 15 privates, 20 sailors, and 12 civilians for Communist agitation in the Bulgarian naval and military forces has started at Varna.

TAMMANY MAN FACES CHARGE

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—The first sensation in Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia's investigation of the Tammany regime came today with a disclosure that charges of misconduct had been filed against red C. Lemmerman, commissioner of the Triborough Bridge Authority, which is in charge of a $60,000,000 bridge project.

The charges were filed on behalf of the mayor by his new commissioner of accounts, Paul Blanchard, long a foe of the old administration.

Lemmerman was accused of receiving $930 as a brokerage fee from the owners of a building for making a lease for Bridge Authority offices. The rental for the offices, in the financial district, was fixed at $21,000 a year.

The Bridge Authority is in charge of a giant span linking Manhattan, the Bronx and Queens, work on which has been started.

VOTE MACHINE STUDY ADOPTED

Voting machines may be the answer in Cambridge to the recent ballot-counting scandal, which resulted in the indictment of Mrs. Mary L. McDonald, sister of Edward J. Gurry, defeated candidate for City Council.

An investigation by a committee on the cost and feasibility of using machines was ordered after the City Council voted to consider their installation.

The order was introduced by Councilor John W. Lyons who headed the committee.

Bounced Romanoff Takes Woe to Court

New York, Jan. 10—The impeccably attired "Prince" Michael Romanoff complained in Yorkville court that he had been "kicked, beaten and thrown out" of the Central Park Casino.

In asking for and obtaining a summons for Sidney Solomon, manager of the place, Romanoff explained he was on parole from the immigration authorities or else "I'd have socked him myself."

Vet Owes Happy Home To Emergency Fund

By FRED PERKINS

There's been too much potato peeling in the life of Jim—never mind what his last name is—of South Boston.

Just 13 years ago this month, when a lot of "Black Jack" Pershing's fighting Yanks were on their way home from France to sweethearts and parades and jobs, Jim was peeling potatoes in Germany in a field kitchen of the U. S. Army of Occupation.

TAKES MOTHER'S PLACE

They were "picked troops," that were sent to guard the Rhine, Jim and his buddies were told, but the troops that got home first were hailed as heroes.

When Jim trudged off a transport, late in 1919, cheers were few —and jobs, were fewer.

But Jim found work. And toiled at it. Fell in love. Married the girl. Had three children. And paid his bills. Until hard times came. And payless paydays.

Jim wasn't a quitter. Nor was Mrs. Jim. They kept a roof over their heads. And over the heads of their youngsters. But Mrs. Jim's strength wasn't equal to her courage. Doctors' bills—and the funeral expenses—took the last of Jim's scanty savings.

But Jim isn't on public welfare. He still holds his head up. And he is working. Three days a week.

Other days, and evenings, too, he sits in the kitchen of his little flat.

AND PEELS POTATOES

Yes, and cooks for himself and the kids. And scrubs clothes. And darns stockings. Dresses the children for school in the morning. And tucks them, at night, into clean, neat beds.

But Jim's budget is figured mighty thin. Jim doesn't eat as much as he should. And he seems to get tired quick on the job.

But he could stand it. Would stand it. Except for the note the teacher sent home.

AGENCY HAS ANSWER

Jean, Jim's oldest girl, so the note said, wasn't doing as well as she should. She was listless and inattentive.

"I'm wondering," the teacher said, "if Jean is having a proper diet. Try and get her to eat more wholesome food."

Seemed more money was needed. And more days of work.

But who, if Jim was out on the job six days a week, would peel potatoes? And do the cooking and dress the kids?

Not Uncle Sam. Not the city welfare. They might furnish food. Might furnish fuel. But they weren't in the business of minding kids.

Luckily for Jim, however, there was a private agency which was able to help. Jim's case—though not by Jim—had been called to its attention. An "emergency" fund was tapped. A motherly woman, who needed the work, has just been hired to help out in Jim's flat when he isn't there.

So Jim from now on won't peel potatoes. His boss was glad to give him extra hours of work.

But the agency hopes—and Jim hopes so, too—that Jim's story may bring financial assistance to all Boston's non-governmental charities, 110 of them in all.

Those charities, through their central organization, the Emergency Campaign of 1934, Inc., are raising $4,500,000 for their activities of the coming year.

General Chairman John W. Farley, Women's Division Chairman Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey, and Metropolitan Boston Chairman Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, meeting with associates yesterday at campaign headquarters, 24 Federal st., made plans for a Greater Boston canvass which starts Monday, Jan. 15.

Final campaign preparations were getting under way today. And Chairman Farley and 110 Boston charitable agencies — and Jim, never mind what his last name is, of South Boston—hopes Boston folks will lend a hand.

FIREMAN HURT IN ROXBURY

One fireman was severly burned in a $5000 fire which broke out early today in a five-story warehouse at Washington and Thornedyke sts., Roxbury.

Timothy Lydon, of 130 Poplar st., a hoseman of the Beverly st. station suffered burns about the face and arms. He was treated at the City Hospital and sent to his home.

The blaze was caused by spontaneous combustion in the basement of the building which is owned by Henry Fox.

BEHIND THE LINES OF THE

20,000 orders of BAKED BEANS

IMAGINE, IF YOU CAN, WHAT twenty thousand plates of baked beans would look like if placed end to end in a broad array before you!

● It is surely a lot of beans and brown bread, but the astonishing thing about it is that Waldorf's Boston division alone serves that many every week. Twenty thousand bean-hungry folks step up to our counters and order this famous Boston meal. And so it goes on week after week.

● And, peculiarly enough, these orders are by no means limited to Saturday night, the accepted bean night. Seven days a week Waldorf customers call for those wonderfully baked California pea beans, which are baked homestyle in the identical sort of a bean-pot that our mothers and grandmothers have used for years.

● I wish every Waldorf patron could see these baked beans as they come from the immense brick ovens every morning. It is a sight that would appeal to every New Englander who was brought up to know how delicious, nourishing and healthful baked beans really are.

● Every pot has been under controlled heat for eight hours. Some contain pork . . . and others are without it, to suit different tastes.

● Every bean is perfectly cooked and, as they are served in our Good Eating Places, they delight the eye. They are real Boston Baked Beans.

● If you are not acquainted with Waldorf baked beans a treat is in store for you. Served with brown bread for fifteen cents they make a wonderfully nourishing meal for a hungry man or woman.

POLICE HOLD EDGE IN AUTO THIEF RACES

Police scored two hits and one miss on their records today as they checked up on three chases through various sections of Greater Boston last night, in which several shots were fired.

As a result of their hits, two Roxbury men will be arraigned in Roxbury Court and a 15-year-old Charlestown youth will appear in Malden Court. The miss has caused police to make a wide search of the South Boston area for three youths, who successfully eluded pursuit last night.

FULLER CAR WRECKED

The Charlestown youth, Arthur J. Doherty, 15, of Green st., was captured by Metropolitan police of the Fellway station after a 10-mile chase through Somerville, Medford and Malden. He and another youth, driving a car reported stolen from Alvan T. Fuller, Jr., fled when the machine crashed into another auto to end the chase. Doherty was captured but the other lad eluded police.

The chase began when Doherty, alleged to have been driving, sideswiped a truck in East Somerville. The truck driver gave chase and in Highland ave., Malden, picked up Patrolman George Manfino. The latter fired four shots during the pursuit, which ended near Wellington bridge.

Doherty was booked at Middlesex Fells station of the Metropolitan police on a charge of misappropriating the Fuller machine.

CITY AUTO STOLEN

The other capture after a chase came in Roxbury. It ended when two men, driving a stolen machine, crashed into another car and plunged through a fence. The stolen machine was the property of the Boston health department and had been parked in the South End.

The arrested men gave their names as Peter Veskeries, 27, of Hampden st., and John A. Brown, 28, of George st., both of Roxbury. The single miss in the series of chases was reported by police of the South Boston station. Three youths in a stolen auto attracted the attention of two patrolmen in a cruising car. The officers gave chase but the boys eluded them.

DIGGERS START GOLD RUSH

Men, women and children, in fact anybody who could grab a shovel in Randolph today experienced all the thrills of a gold rush when workmen, digging a well near the unoccupied farm of Orrin E. Reynolds discovered a trace of red-yellow substance resembling ore.

The find was made by Paul Ewald and Milton Fuller, the well diggers, who in turn showed it to Reynolds, their employer. Reynolds declared he knew gold ore and pronounced the substance as such. Then the gold rush started.

Here They Are in Person

FREEMAN "AMOS" GOSDEN CHARLES "ANDY" CORRELL

"Amos 'n' Andy," especially posed in Boston to recall a troubled night in February, 1928, when they had not the slightest intimation that they would be top-liners in the entertainment world, or be called "Amos 'n' Andy," or anything. In fact when the outlook was slightly regusting. (Boston American Photo.)

Life Not Beer 'n' Skittles for Amos 'n' Andy

By EDWARD DEAN SULLIVAN

Over at the R. K. O. Boston Theater this week are two young men who perform most entertainingly, interspersing their routine with a miracle at 7 o'clock. At that hour they step out of their tiny dressing room and enter two million homes . . . airily.

You know their voices, you know their history and you know—generally speaking—just how fate turned its warm ray on "Amos 'n' Andy." So the purpose of this brief article is to tell you something you don't know—an optimistic lesson in a pessimistic era.

BLUE AMONG BANKERS

Since August 28, 1928, Amos 'n' Andy have never missed one night on the radio. They and all of their friends rap all sorts of wood in all directions upon the mention of that fact. No other entertainment feature of any type has ever reached a similar time record with an identical cast; no other radio performers have equalled the income of these true stars in total and no other this and that and thus and so. All a matter of record.

So let's get off the record . . .

On February 4, 1928, a Chicago banker gave a party. That was back in the old days when bankers gave parties and hardly anyone was aware that those beautiful stone buildings could be tipped over so easily.

Anyway at this party were two talented young fellows, Freeman F. Gosden and Charles J. Correll; a group of bankers (Hiss-s-s!) and this writer. (How am I doing, boys?)

The house, adjoining the Rockefeller mansion, was one of the most imposing on the Chicago gold coast.

It seems that everything was pleasant enough except that the two young men had met with a bitter disappointment. Briefly, they had been broadcasting from Station WGN in Chicago and had really been very good. On the air they were known as "Sam and Henry and just when fan letters had begun to come in and when people were beginning to speak well of them, they were let go. This very day, too.

They were pretty blue, even as you or I.

AWED BY MILLIONS

But folks there cheered them up with careless words. They could think up something else just as good, couldn't they? You know, songs maybe; or tell jokes, hey!

Someone was reminded that Gosden, now known as "Amos," could sing. Amos, not much in the mood, said that his friend, now known the world over as "Andy," could play. And no one was mistaken about either talent. Yesterday Freeman Gosden reminded me of the names of the songs, "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Let's Talk About My Sweetie" and "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby."

It sounded swell and the bankers all said so. That was the sort of thing for the boys to do on the radio. That was somepin'. But the boys had sung thousands of songs in their time and they were darn sorry to turn from the "Sam and Henry" routine on which they had placed such hope. Shortly they went away from there. Someone remarked, anyway, that Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick disliked late song and her home was right next door.

In leaving, these talented but depressed minstrels passed the door of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, then credited with the possession of $40,000,000 and called "the richest woman in America."

Three weeks after that party "Sam and Henry" were hired under the title "Amos and Andy" to broadcast for the Chicago Daily News, three months later they had signed the contract that has made them among the wealthiest performers of all time.

Three weeks ago an undertaker sued for the money due him for the funeral of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, whose fortune vanished before her death.

So you see it just goes to show something or other. You can't tell a thing about anything. Cheer up! Life is too mysterious to waste a moment figuring anything out.

WYNEKOOP IS DUCKING QUIZ

Chicago, Jan. 10 (INS)—Behind dust-colored shades in a stone house on West Monroe st., Earle Wynekoop, whose mother, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, is about to be tried for slaying Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, his wife, is in hiding today.

State police have waited outside for over a week—to ask him a question. One question they forgot to ask while he was in prison under suspicion. A question of utmost importance on the eve of the gaunt woman physician's trial.

Earle Wynekoop will not come out. He knows the police have no warrant to enter the house. Earle will not even discuss the question on the telephone.

The states police men would not reveal the nature of the question they wish to put to Earle.

Newton Chaplain's Son on Probation

Edward N. Ellis, 18, Newton high school student and son of the Rev. Arthur M. Ellis, chaplain of the State Senate, was placed on probation for six months by Judge William F. Bacon in Newton district court today. He was charged mith the larceny of articles valued at $30 from a Newtonville drug store.

CottonMather Made Find of Sun-Spots

Washington, Jan. 10 (US)—The sun-spot cycle was "old stuff" to Cotton Mather, famous New England philosopher, who lived three centuries ago.

In a curious little book entitled "The Christian Philosopher," just discovered in the Smithsonian collection here, Cotton Mather sets down his views as to this phenomenon. He says:

"Upon the convexity of the sun, there are observed some black spots which are moveable and changeable. They move regularly towards the west and finish their revolution in about five and twenty days; so testifying to us that the sun turns upon its own axis."

Mather estimated that the distance to the nearest fixed star was some two billion miles and "so great is the distance that it would take a cannon ball, going all the day at the same rate of speed, about 700,000 years to get there."

CAR INSURANCE PLAN OFFERED

Massachusetts' three-cent gasoline tax would be diverted to a compensation fund, supplanting the present automobile liability law, in a bill filed today by Sen. Joseph B. Clancy, of Lynn, for Charles O'Donnell, of Chestnut st., Lynn.

The proposal is the first of the 1934 session aimed at the repeal of the auto insurance law.

It provides that the proposed compensation fund be operated under a comission of three, a doctor a lawyer and a business man.

It provides that doctors in liability cases be paid by the commission, and that legal fees be set at ten per cent of the amount recovered for a client. A minimum fee is set at $25.

Hit andrun drivers' victims are cared for under a protective clause and may collect from the compensation fund.

Supreme Court Split Hope of Doomed Murder Pair

The last hope for life of Herman "Red" Snyder, who with John A. Donnellon is under sentence of death for slaying a Somerville filling station attendant, rested with Gov. Ely and the Executive Council today.

A hearing was to be granted to Abraham C. Webber, counsel for Snyder, on a new petition for commutation to life imprisonment. With Henry C. Fielding, associate counsel, Webber based his move on the minority report of the U. S. Supreme Court, which dissented from the ruling denying Snyder a new trial.

Four of the nine members of the court contended that Snyder had been deprived of his Constitutional rights in not being permitted to accompany the jury to the scene of the murder.

13 SEEK POSTS AS HARVARD OVERSEERS

Thirteen Harvard graduates, including two judges, a mayor and five attorneys, today had been named as candidates to the Harvard Board of Overseers to fill vacancies which will occur by normal retirement next June.

The annual slate of nominations for the vacancies were mailed yesterday to more than 50,000 Harvard men scattered to all corners of the globe. The selection of the 13 was made by the committee on nominations of the Harvard Alumni Association.

FALL RIVER JURIST NAMED

They were:

Charles Warren, '89, of Washington, D. C., a lawyer and former assistant attorney general; James M. Morton, Jr., '91, of Fall River, U. S. Circuit Court judge and former president of the Harvard Alumni Association; Joseph L. Valentine, '98, of Chicago, banker and former president of the Associated Harvard Clubs; George S. Franklin, '92, of New York City, lawyer; Albert F. Bigelow, '03, of Brookline, lawyer and chairman of the ways and means committee of the Massachusetts State Legislature; Charles S. Perkins, '04, of Santa Barbara, Cal., former railroad official; Samuel Cabot, '06, of Boston, manufacturing chemist; Harrison Tweed, '07, of Montauk, N. Y., lawyer; Francis A. Harding, '09, of Chestnut Hill, manufacturer.

Sinclair Weeks, '14, of Newton, mayor of Newton; Robert P. Patterson, LL.B., '15, of New York City, U. S. District Court judge; Robert Cutler, '16, of Brookline, lawyer, and Chase Mellen, Jr., '20, of New York City, banker and president of the Republican committee for New York county.

EIGHT SEEK THREE PLACES

The five members, whose six-year term expires in June, are Homer Gage of Worcester, Joseph Lee of Boston, Jesse Isadore Straus of New York, Mark Sullivan of Washington, D. C., and Leverett Saltonstall of Boston, Speaker of the Massachusetts House.

At the same time it was announced that eight candidates have been named to fill the three vacancies in June on the board of directors of the Harvard Alumni Association.

They are:

Richard Inglis, '03, S. Euclid, O.; Richard M. Gummere, A. M. '04, Haverford, Pa.; William O. Hotchkiss, '05, Chicago; John Reynolds, '07, New York; George P. Denny, '08, Baltimore; Francis E. Parker, Jr., '18, Greenwich, Ct.; Henry H. Fuston, '21, Brookline, and Philip H. Thayer, '23, Dedham.

The eight candidates from whom three will be selected to the Harvard fund council are:

Edwin G. Merrill, '93, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; Evan Hollister, '97, Buffalo, N. Y.; Walter F. Dillingham, '00, Honolulu; Monte M. Lemann, '03, New Orleans; F. Abbot Goodhue, '06, Hewett, L. I., N. Y.; John J. Rowe, '07, Cincinnati; G. Peabody Gardiner, Jr., '10, Brookline, and Leo F. Daly, '27, Andover.

CUTLER HEADS ALUMNI

Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, who last year was appointed surgeon-in-chief of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and Professor of Surgery at the Harvard Medical School, today was elected chief marshal to lead the Harvard alumni at the Commencement exercises in June.

DRINKERS WEEP AS BEER GOES

Earnest Dorchester drinkers were still trying to restrain their sobs today as they recalled the sight of 2600 gallons of beer being dumped from the attic windows of a dwelling in Spencer st., that section.

The beer, discovered in a raid by police and federal agents after they had arrested a man and woman for violation of the internal revenue laws, was "dumped" for fear that the building would collapse, officials said. Four small children slept peacefully on the first floor as the amber flood descended from the windows.

A search warrant was procured after federal agents stopped a man driving from the house and found 60 gallons of liquor in his car. He gave his name as Charles Morse, of Columbia rd., Dorchester. His woman companion said she was Mary E. Hicks, 37, of Newburyport.

Officials said Morse had been arrested in Chelsea last Sunday when 500 gallons of mixed liquors were found in his car. In addition to the beer in huge vats in the attic of the house, raiders found a 200-gallon still in the second floor. The still and vats were dismantled and a few gallons of the liquor saved by the raiders for evidence.

Big Navy Our Cheapest Safety Insurance

the cheapest premiums on our national life insurance.

If we are wise enough to know that in a new era, speed, concealment and hitting power are to be found in the air, under the sea, and over the waters, we can provide an assurance that we and our children can go to bed at night—safe!

The United States is not safe today, as Congress well knows. Welching nations fail to pay their debts.

We engage in reprisals and they do also. We say to France and Great Britain:

"No more imports of wines and whisky, no more of this or that unless you do this and that."

This nationalistic, economic reprisal does not make peace.

After a period of great hope for what is called internationalism, we come to the most nationalistic era that memory can record. And at the same moment, a world-wide depression makes it easy, from the point of view of political leaders who are desirous of holding power, to go to war.

GREAT WALL IS HE NAVY

Were it not for the geographical isolation of the United States, hated by many because it still stands on promises of honor, our present helplessness would be a scandal.

That scandal Roosevelt would have at an end.

Our great wall is the navy.

To repeat, money spent on the navy has no strings tied to it.

Defense is the first obligatory function of government. No one can say that appropriations or administration of defense is unconstitutional.

No one can say that defense, in the case of naval, air, under water, and speed, hit-and-run power is anything but cheap insurance—the cheapest of all—provided we also have the navy well manned.

A naval strength almost good enough, as we have said so many times, is like an egg almost fresh enough. There can be no greater waste in the world than a naval strength which loses and can't win.

CONGRESS, WE MUST HAVE A NAVY THAT CAN WIN!

BABY, 23 DAYS' OLD, IS GONE

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—A father refused today to become alarmed at the disappearance of his 23-day-old daughter. He told police he believed she was a victim of kidnaping.

Little Patricia Luciano was taken from her home yesterday by a woman who told Mrs. Mary Luciano that Mrs. Fiorello LaGuardia, wife of the mayor, was outfitting children at the home relief bureau.

She promised to return the child and left what the mother thought was a typewritten order for the baby. Luciano on his return home went to police.

Recently, during investigation of the murder of a young girl, police questioned the occupants of the Luciano house and made known that they were in want.

Stories of the family's plight appeared in newspapers and Luciano offered the theory his daughter had been "kidnaped" by a woman who had read the accounts and wanted a child.

The driver of the cab told police he had taken the woman to a subway station.

Loss of Arm Brings $13,000 in Court

$50,000 BAIL IN DAVIS ATTACK

Bail of $50,000 was set in South Boston court today for two Norwood men, alleged at their arraignment to have attempted to bribe the state's chief witness not to testify again four men charged with attacking Mrs. Anna Davis, 21, of Norwood.

Joseph Pecora, 28, of Oolah ave., and John J. Tarnaykiewicz, 25, of Washington st., both in Norwood, pleaded not guilty to a charge of obstructing justice. Judge Edward L. Logan continued the case until next Monday.

Mrs. Davis, declared to have been attacked on Nov. 26 in a South Boston doorway, testified the two Norwood men offered her $300 and a trip to California if she would fail to testify against her four alleged assailants and then threatened her with bodily harm when she spurned the offer.

The four alleged to have attacked her are John J. Doyle, 23, of West Second st.; Joseph Adamski, 18, of Athens st., and Edward Wilzanis, 17, of D st., all in South Boston, and William Jennings, 32, of Tremont st., South End.

WINE TRUCK IS HIJACKED

A truck of the Adley Express Co., Boston, loaded with $10,000 worth of wines and groceries, was hijacked early today on the Albany post road at Pelham Manor, N. Y., and its driver kidnaped and held captive for five hours.

State police who received the report from New York authorities relayed it to Boston. Investigation here indicated that the shipment, while in a truck of Massachusetts registration, was from the New Haven, Ct., office of the Adley company.

Two masked gunmen took over the truck at Pelham Manor and turned the driver over to confederates in a sedan at Mount Vernon. He was driven around the countryside until 6 a. m. then released in woods near Port Chester.

The Dotted Line, Please, Bruce

Hollywood, Jan. 10 (INS)—Bruce Cabot, film actor, sought to adopt his wife's daughter by a previous marriage, but he signed the adoption papers on the wrong line—and the proceedings will have to be done all over again today.

The little girl, Dorothy Ames, 9, is a daughter of Cabot's bride, Adrienne Ames, film star, by her first husband. The daughter took the name Ames when her mother married Stephen Ames, New York broker from whom Miss Ames was divorced in Reno the day before she married Cabot in New Mexico.

Gay Dances Part Couple of 70

Kankakee, Ill., an. 10 (AP)—Nyman Arnove, past 70, came into court the other day and asked if he couldn't please have a divorce from his wife Anna, also past 70, on the ground she deserted him because he wouldn't take her to dances and gay parties.

He got it.

Ford Scores Again on Government Bid

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—The automobile interests of Henry Ford were in possession of a second victory today in an effort to gain government contracts despite the refusal of the Detroit manufacturer to join the NRA.

A move by the Interior Department to turn down the low bid of a Ford company on the ground that Ford "is not a member of the NRA" was overruled late yesterday by J. R. McCarl, Comptroller-General.

Fisherman Found Unconscious on Ship

Gloucester, Jan. 10—Found unconscious aboard his fishing boat, the Jackie E, with coal gas pouring from a stove, Joseph Frazier, 76-year-old fisherman, was saved by police here early today.

Frazier's unconscious form was discovered by a friend who went aboard the boat. Police were called and worked with an inhalator for more than an hour before the aged man was pronounced out of danger.

Rudnick Home Under Guard in Threats

Newton police today continued to keep a close watch on the homes of Louis E. Rudnick of Hyde Park, Newton Highlands, and two other men, following the receipt of threatening letters from a man believed to be a maniac.

According to Police Capt. Richard J. Goode, the letters are of such a nature as to convince investigators the writer is insane.

INSANE WOMAN KEPT 2 YEARS IN STABLE

Ridgefield Park, N. J., Jan. 10 (AP)—Detectives strove today to piece together the strange story surrounding the imprisonment of a naked madwoman in a dirty, unheated, closet-like room over a stable on the old Barnes estate.

The woman, Mrs. Sophie Cerardi, 42, pronounced insane by a county physician, meanwhile was receiving medical attention at the county hospital, Bergen Pines.

The two other characters of the strange tale, the two alleged jailers, Joseph Cerardi, 34, the woman's husband, and his housekeeper, Miss Mary Griffin, 35, were held under arrest in county jail on charges of false imprisonment, and authorities said there was a possibility of a second charge of abusing an insane person.

Much police interest centered on the husband, a former middleweight pugilist, who they said was questioned in the Lindbergh kidnaping case after the body of the murdered Lindbergh baby was found near a shack where Cerardi stayed occasionally at Hopewell.

Cerardi, also known as Gerardi, rented the four room apartment above the stable almost two years ago. Neighbors told police they saw his wife arrive with him and she was then apparently in good health. When police found her last night she had wasted away to 50 pounds.

Cong. Utterback to Seek Re-election

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—Rep. Utterback (D.-Me.), announced today his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for reelection as representative from the third Maine district.

Utterback said he knew of no other candidate seeking the nomination. Former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, who ra n against Utterback in 1932, has announced he would seek the Republican nomination

CRACK CHINESE ARMY REBELS

Shanghai, Jan. 10 (AP) — The most famous fighting unit in China—the 19th Route Army which defended Shanghai from the Japanese in 1932—has turned rebel.

The 19th is fighting in Fukien province against the combined forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, for whom they battled just as fiercely two years ago.

It fights under Gen. Tsai Ting-kai—a slender, nonchalant and youngish man who looks more like a poet than a soldier.

Meanwhile, Madame Chiang Kai-shek, American-educated wife of the "strong man" of the Nationalists, is playing a daring role today in rebellious Fukien province.

Reports indicate she is taking a man's part in negotiations with the rebels.

On one occasion she flew unaccompanied, except for her pilot, from Chuchow, Chekiang province and returned with word that she had received emissaries of rebel commanders who sought to surrender in North Fukien.

Ever since she and the general were married in 1927 she has taken an active part in government affairs. The daughter of a Methodist mission helper, she has retained her affiliation with the church and has a close interest in the Y. W. C. A. She is a Wellesley graduate.

sarily come back into superior bodies, possibly even in lovely white-skinned, golden-haired Nordic bodies. After a while there wouldn't be any other kind of bodies to come back to.

When the courageous Cardinal Faulhaber reminds Chancellor Hitler that the world was not saved by "Aryan" blood but "by the blood of the Saviour," the Jewish people in Germany are especially interested.

They can add to Cardinal Faulhaber's statement that insofar as earthly matters are concerned, while the spirit of the Saviour was entirely divine, His bodily blood was strictly Jewish, since His mother was a girl of the Jewish race. Did Chancellor Hitler ever think of that? Will he be sorry, on the judgment day, that he did not think of it? Why, in his opinion, did divine wisdom select a Jewish girl to be the mother of Christ? There were plenty of "Aryan" or "Nordic" girls on earth.

"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," is inadequate in Afghanistan, when an eye or a tooth of the Shah is concerned.

A young student killed the Shah and yesterday 14 were put to death, including the father and two uncles of Abdul Khaliq, the young student-murderer.

It was once the custom when anybody committed a crime to kill all his family or at least confiscate all their property. That seems still to hold good in Afghanistan.

The murdered Shah had aroused some hostility by putting to death a number of rebellious persons by "boiling them in vegetable oil." Why "vegetable oil" was not made clear.

$250,000 GIFT TO LINDY

ing exactly what it is for, which memorandum Mr. Cuthell and Col Breckenridge should prepare, viz:—I will deliver to you certificates for 25,000 shares of stock and receive back either the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., check endorsed, or your personal check, according as Mr. Cuthell and Mr. Long advise.

"3—This will complete the first part of our trade and leave you with the stock in your possession.

"I suggest that you do not put very much of this stock in your possession, because when you sell it—I hope that you will sell part of it on the first favorable opportunity—either the delivery of the stock in your own name or the transfer of it on the books would create a lot of attention which is quite unnecessary.

"Col. Breckenridge Long will no doubt agree with this advice."

Senator Black examined Sheaffer closely about Lindbergh's status and the nature of the gift.

Sheaffer stated that Lindbergh then was chief of the newly-formed "technical committee" of the T. A. T.

"What was the gift for?" Senator Black asked.

"Well, he was doing a lot for us, surveying the country for proposed routes, etc.," replied Sheaffer.

GOT $10,000 YEAR, TOO

Q—Well, but he was getting a salary, a yearly salary, was he not? A—Yes, he was getting $10,000 a year as a retainer.

Q—Well, then $10,000 was for services, was it not? A—Yes, it was for services.

Reading of the letter into the records recalled testimony given yesterday by Erle Halliburton, independent passenger airline operator of Oklahoma.

Halliburton refused to merge with the Transcontinental Air Transport to save his company from being "frozen out" of an alleged air mail contract deal being arranged by Postmaster-General Brown, because "T. A. T. had been prostituting the names of Col. Lindbergh and Amelia Earhart" in order to get advantages from the postoffice department which would cost the taxpayers "plenty of money."

Black asked Sheaffer if he knew whether Lindbergh took the advice of Keys and his ownership of the T. A. T. "gift" stock by putting it in a voting trust.

"There was a voting trust," Sheaffer replied, "but I cannot say if Col. Lindbergh put his stock in or not."

During recess legal assistants of the committee searched Sheaffer's file of correspondence for details of the "income tax" features of the T. A. T. stock "gift" to Lindbergh.

They were also searching for "option rights" granted on stock of the company. Sheaffer testified he knew of only two such grants. One, he said, was to Blair & Co., Wall st. banking firm which floated the stock, and J. L. Maddux, president of the Maddux Air Lines, which was absorbed by the T. A. T.

BROWN FACES GRILL

Senator Black said he did not know whether it would be necessary to call Lindbergh, but that all those connected with the evidence of the burned records of Postmaster-General Brown would be asked to testify. His statement included Brown, who said in New York today he would appear if asked.

D. M. Sheaffer, chairman of the executive committee of Transcontinental Air Transport, which was merged with Western Air Express to bid for the route, was questioned about conferences with Walter F. Brown, former postmaster general.

He said he was not sure Brown had suggested the consolidation of the two lines so they could be awarded the contract.

Sheaffer, smoking a cigar, said he had conferred once with Herbert Hoover, Jr., while the negotiations were in progress. Hoover was connected with Western Air Express.

The witness told of the organization of his company by the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1925. He said he kept W. W. Atterbury, president of the railroad, informed of negotiations

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—Walter F. Brown, former postmaster general, whose air mail contract awards are under scrutiny by a Senate committee, said today he would appear before the committee, if asked, to testify "to the facts."

Kill that COLD!

Don't Merely Coddle It with Half-Way Measures!

A cold is nothing to trifle with! It may end seriously. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for an internal treatment. It also calls for a COLD remedy and not something good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is direct and internal—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headaches and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is sold by all druggists, 30c and 50c. Accept no substitute.

ATLAS DELAYS MELON CUT

New York, Jan. 10 (INS)—Indefinite postponement of the proposed three-for-one split-up of the stock of Atlas Tack Corp. was indicated today by the announcement that the special meeting of directors, called for today to act on the matter, has been called off.

At the same time it was announced that no definite future date had been set for the meeting.

The proposed split-up of the stock was announced several weeks ago when the stock had reached a level about $30 a share, following its sensational rise from a low of $5.50 in the fore part of 1933. Since then, however, the market price broke abruptly to current levels around $10 a share, leading to the investigation now under way by the state attorney-general's department.

Boy Hero of Rescue in Icy Waters

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 10 (AP)—Exhausted and numbed as he feebly struggled to keep afloat in the frigid waters of the Northwest arm, William Bolden, 21, forgot his own desperate plight and warned his youthful rescuer to avoid any further danger.

"For God's sake, go back. Let me go!" he shouted to 17-year-old Charlie Johnson, attempting to reach him with a long eel spear pole.

But Charlie shouted back words of encouragement and urged the sinking man to retain his hold on the spear. Bolden did and was gradually hauled to safety on the creaking ice, when Johnson stood at the risk of his own life.

Chic in Black With Silver Fox

WE CAUGHT A GLIMPSE OF MRS. SPRAGUE at the Emma Mills Literary Morning on Monday, looking very chic in black with silver foxes.

Such a hold has this popular speaker on her Boston public that we believe she could recite Mother Goose and her enthralled audience would accept it as literature . . . now don't jump out of your chairs, dear ladies of the committee, "the world is very dull and flat when there's nothing whatever to grumble at." The difficulty we have is in doing full justice to YOU in the limited space at our disposal, you who make Emma Mills possible to a Boston audience. We are not inclined to run the risk of wounding so valued a force in our midst, but could you not endeavor to remind Miss Mills that when the subject of her discourse is her Personal Impressions of Contemporary European Writers it is a pity the impressions are so slight we could not discern them.

And while on the subject, she in turn might remind her visiting celebrities, if they must be flippant with the grand dames of Boston, why not give them a hearty laugh and have done with it. Valentine Williams' eulogy of Miss Mills brought tears to our eyes . . . in fact, when he suggested that he was about to write a crime novel and put Miss Mills in it as one of the characters, we hastened to suggest that she be the victim of the murder in the first chapter and arrange the denouement so that a literary reporter commit the dreadful deed with a bottle of Schnapps.

Most Interesting Speaker

KATHERINE MAYO (Mother India, to you) gave a swell sales talk for her new book, "Soliders, What Next?" . . . in fact, she was the most interesting speaker of the morning, literary or not, and we will read the book. She likewise showered bouquets on the esteemed Miss Mills and as though that weren't enough.

Lucille Douglass, archeologist and advisor to a lost civilization, climaxed the morning with a shower of flowery phrases for the aforesaid Miss Mills . . . It's all right with us . . . but we didn't expect to hear Personal Impressions of Miss Mills . . . we got all mixed up and tried to tell our troubles to the charming Lady Mott Hallowell and only got Sh . . . Sh . . . ed and a cup of coffee for enlightenment.

Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell

It is only fair to add that the Lady Hallowell wore a very chic chapeau in the brown tones and has recently returned from a visit with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hecksecher, in their beautiful new home in Pennsylvania.

Others noted around the luncheon tables were Mrs. Horace Frazer, Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Miss Elizabeth Leland, Miss Betty Foster, Mrs. John Ramsey, who left early with her squash racquet; Mrs. Irving Rice, authority on flowers and garden clubs . . . why go on, you may see them for yourself on the 22nd over New Horizons in Literature by Miss Mills.

the social whirl

With Dorothy Whipple Fry

GLIMPSED AMONG THE SMART SET dining in the Russian room of the Brunswick cellar, was Miss Rose Whitman, charming daughter of Mrs. Chatfield Whitman who stopped in for a bite before the opening night of, "No More Ladies" at the Plymouth. Lovely she looked in a midnight blue of crepe evening gown. Her soft brown hair curling adorably about her piquante little face.

Also dining in the cellar was Mr. Reginald Foster, Jr., tall and distinguished looking, seemingly enjoying the place to the fullest. Also glimpsed enjoying the dim light and glamorous music of the place was distinguished Mrs. Henry F. McLean of Beverly Farms and Boston. It is so delightful to find a place really different and full of colorful atmosphere. Then on to the very successful opening night of "No More Ladies." Another rare treat and something quite out of the ordinary. Miss Rebekah Hobbs wore a gorgeous gown of wine coloured cire satin.

Mrs. C. F. Toppan

She chatted with charming Mrs. Benjamin Estabrook, wearing an exquisite sky-blue lace frock, and Mrs. Cortland Van Voorhis, very distinguished looking in black with gorgeous sable furs. Mrs. Estabrook came especially to greet Mrs. FitzWilliam Sargent (Mary Sargent), a friend of hers with whom she was dining last fall when the news arrived that the part which she played so successfully last night was to be hers. Mrs. Sargent's hostess, Miss Louise Condit, was also in the audience strolling between the acts and wearing an exceedingly good-looking black evening coat, trimmed with chinchilla.

Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Chase, glimpsed among the first night-ers. Mrs. Chase, as usual, charming and witty, especially enjoyed the play, since here is a rare sense of humor. Her evening dress of smart black crepe was covered by a sumptuous white ermine evening coat.

Stunning in an exquisite shade of blue was Mrs. Frederick Cullen. Her frock had one of the smart low backs and her evening coat of white pan-velvet with white fox collar made her one of the outstanding figures of the evening. Mr. Frederick Cullen, Dr. Ariel George and Mrs. George were also in the party. The latter looking exceedingly well in a white evening coat over a black velvet frock.

Petite and animated Marion Clark was among those present in a trig little black frock that seemed to go exceptionally well with her fascinating personality. Mrs. Charles McDermott always so distinguished looking wore black crepe with suggestions of the Spanish shawl, and fringe that adds such a graceful touch to any costume.

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

Benefit Will Be Held Next Month

MISS ASTRID RICE, chairman, and her committee of popular and outstanding debutantes met at the residence of Miss Carolyn Hunnewell, 36 Commonwealth ave., yesterday afternoon and busied themselves addressing the several hundred invitations for the black and blue ball which they are planning to give at the Copley-Plaza on Saturday evening, Feb. 10, for the Hill Side School for Boys.

The school will benefit from the proceeds of this party. A recent visit by Miss Rice and her committee to this worthy institution located in Marlboro prompted Miss Rice to undertake this activity.

She has chosen for her assistants, Miss Barbara Eaton as chairman of the dance committee, Miss Eleanor King of Milton in charge of tickets, Miss Margaret Blake, Miss Carolyn Hunnewell, Miss Amy Lang, Miss Eleanor Shaw, Miss Marion Wood, Miss Louise McNeil, Miss Frances Turner, Miss Anne Upton, Miss Barbara Taylor, Miss Bettina Eshleman, Miss Betty Reece and Miss Constance Turner.

The boys who attend the Hill Side school have through loss of parents, relatives or through other misfortunes, been deprived of a home and its kindly influence.

Special Show for Children Saturday

Lovely 16th century costumes and settings will feature the presentation of "Cinderella" at the Repertory Theater next Saturday morning and afternoon when the Children's Theater of New York presents Clara Tree Major's own dramatization of Madame d'Aulney's story, under the surpices of the Boston University Women's Council. Among the new names on the patroness list are those of Mrs. Horace Binney, Mrs. Lorence M. Woodside and Miss Mary Curley.

Additional members of the suburban committees on the Six Plays for Children, of which "Cinderella" is the third, are Mrs. E. Granville Crabtree, Mrs. Franklin R. Swan, Mrs. Herbert D. Boyd, Miss Louise Joyce and Mrs. F. A. Chevalier.

At the Saturday afternoon performance Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, president of the Charlotte Cushman Club, Miss Gertrude Cornish, principal of the House in the Pines School and Miss Helen Hosmer, principal of Concord Academy, will be the guests of honor.

Mrs. Charles E. Parkhurst, Mrs. George S. Gibbs and Mrs. Frederic A. Dutton will pour coffee in the lobby between the acts. Hostesses behind the curtain rises, Mrs. Warren Powell will speak to the children in the audience, Mrs. Lucy Jenkins Franklin and Mrs. Howard M. Le Sourd will be in charge of the book table in the lobby.

Mrs. C. Sawyer Heads Group

Mrs. Clifford D. Sawyer is in charge of the social arrangements for the parish meeting to be held by Trinity Church, this evening, in the parish house, at which Rt. Rev. Philip Cook, Bishop of Delaware, will be the speaker.

Mrs. Sawyer will be assisted for the evening by a large and prominent group of hostesses, including Mrs. Charles Barnes, Mrs. Edwin A. Locke, Mrs. Edwin F. Phipps, Mrs. Walter Place, Mrs. Henry Howes, Mrs. Arthur G. Mition, Mrs. Lancaster Perry, Mrs. George A. Plummer, Miss Priscilla Bramhall, Miss Sally Waters, Miss Betty Willis, Miss Sally Adams, Miss Jean Adams, Miss Barbara Bremer, Miss Marian Ducey, Miss Leonora Kimball, Miss Priscilla Pierce, Miss Karolyn Sampson, Miss Peggy Smith and Miss Elizabeth Towle.

This Is Life

—By Robert E. Rogers—

ACCORDING to the press, our old friend, Emma Goldman, the anarchist, now in Toronto, has been granted permission to enter the United States. She was deported to Russia, you will remember, in December, 1919, along with her lifelong companion, Alexander Berkman. At about the same time Big Bill Haywood, the Polyphemus of the I. W. W., was sent over. He died not long after.

Miss Goldman did not die, being a woman of quite extraordinary strength. Indeed, if she had not possessed the nine lives of a cat, her activities as recounted in her autobiography, would have worn her out long ago. That story of her life, by the way, is one of the most extraordinary records of recent years, recounting a radical career of nearly half a century and running parallel to that told about in Lincoln Steffens' "Autobiography."

Those two books furnish a wonderful contrast, that of the tired Liberal, who at the end recognizes that his mistake lay in wanting to change over the world in a way different from what God wanted, and that of the unreconstructed anarchist who was glad to leave America because there was no freedom here, who was heart-broken to find there was even less freedom in Russia, and who now will come back if she is allowed.

Sincerity Unquestioned

NO ONE CAN, I think, question Emma Goldman's sincerity in preaching through all the difficult times of the Homestead strike, of McKinley's assassination, and the dark days of the war and the Palmer heresy hunts afterward. She was a brilliant student of literature a brilliant lecturer and writer upon drama, a woman capable of earning a great deal of money if she had not chosen instead to put herself outside the pale for the sake of an ideal.

That reminds me to ask how much the immigration department knows about literature. The report is that Goldman was allowed to enter "if she agreed to make only literary speeches." The report is that she refused at first to be gagged. Foolish of her! She ought to know by this time that literature contains just as much dynamite as politics any day of the year. Emma Goldman lecturing on "The Lower Depths" or Ouida or Ibsen's "Enemy of Society" is quite as effective as a wagon load of speakers propaganding for direct action.

Think of what "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did in the fifties. Then there was a volume of short stories, "Tales of a Hunter," called the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of Russia, published not long before the liberation of the Russian serfs in the early sixties. Then there was Dostoievski's "House of the Dead," which it has been said did more than the book did for the propaganda against transportation to Siberia what Turgeniev's earlier book had done for serfdom.

Propaganda

IN THIS COUNTRY there might have been no Tugwell-Copeland pure food and drug bill, if Upton Sinclair had not swept the country with his naturalistic propaganda novel, "The Jungle." Do you remember Kaufman's story, "The Red Lamp," and Miss Robbins's "Little Lost Sister"? both heavy ammunition against the white slave traffic, or Elizabeth Barrett's poem, "Do you hear the children crying?"—the child labor poem?

Personally I should like to let Emma Goldman loose on a platform with the prophecy of Amos, dated some little time before the fall of Samaria and the Northern Kingdom, all about the rich men and the poor men and the imminent wrath of Jehovah. And think of the dynamite in the "Magnificat," the song of the Virgin at the Annunciation:

"He hath put down the mighty from their seats,
And hath exalted the humble and weak;
He hath filled the hungry with good things
And the rich He hath sent empty away."

My own respectful advice is to the sincere advice to the administration is to let her discuss everything but literature. Let her discuss the ten billion dollar budget, let her attack the Supreme Court, let her rage against a capitalist government disguished in sheep's clothing of liberalism. Let her stir up trouble against the bankers, the financiers, the industrialists, and her natural enemies, the Communists.

Would Bar Her

BUT DON'T LET her lecture on literature! Don't let her propagandize from Hauptmann's "Weavers," nor from Andreyeff's "Anathema," nor from Galsworthy's "Strife" or "Justice," nor from Michael Gold. Let her stick to statistics, economics and philosophy—which do not mean a thing to most folks. But search her baggage for Sinclair's anthology, "The Cry for Justice," lest she use its phrases for lecture texts.

There was once a man named VoHaire, a litgrary bird. There was once a man named Rousseau, named Tolstoi, named William Lloyd Garrison. Their stock of goods was nothing more substantial than mere literature. But they were not healthy—decidedly not healthy—for the established government.

Emma Goldman seems to have the idea that literature is intended to convey important ideas and fundamental meanings. Right away that rules her out of the country as an alien!

An Old Family Bible

A large and bulky Book with metal hasp
That joins the covers, plain and stiff; wherein
Are found so many things for one to clasp
And cherish; faded sundries that have been
Most carefully and fondly laid away
Between the pages of the holy Word:
A lock of baby hair; a dried, pressed spray
Of flowers; a childish drawing of a bird.
Some tawny colored paper clippings, and
A big, flamboyant, lacy valentine;
A letter done in clumsy, boyish hand;
A genealogy in brief design.
This Book, apart from being His command,
Is a guarded coffer—a most sacred shrine.

A Foreign-Born President

—By Clarence Day—

ONE of the peculiar rules laid down in the United States Constitution is that no foreign-born citizen can become President. The men who made this rule were descended from more or less recent immigrants and no such rule existed in the nations from which they had come.

Is this provision still necessary? And does it protect us against any danger?

A MAN from abroad wouldn't have the traditions of this country "in his blood" we might argue. But not all of those traditions are useful or holy and anyhow plenty of newcomers have more feeling for them than many of our native born. And if a majority of our citizens wanted to elect a man who had come here from some other country, why shouldn't such a majority have its desire?

It is often a man from outside who is the strongest leader for either a good or bad cause or country. In the midst of the Bolshevists' first upheavel in Russia there was a passionate hymn that they used to sing denouncing the bourgeois—and it was the bourgeois who wrote it. In America some descendants of the Puritans are leading radical movements, while the descendants of recent immigrants vote for conservative measures in Congress. In England those members of the House of Lords who belong to old families are bored with it, while recently made peers who are ex-manufacturers love its remaining prerogatives.

ENGLAND has never had much objection to being ruled by a non-English king. Foreign kings used to be as thick as blackberries there in the old days, when Danes and Vikings and Romans and Saxons landed here and there on the coasts. The native-born kings were always having to get out and move westward. It might be interesting to trace what became of those royal lines if we could. Their descendants may be milking cows on some little farm in Ireland today.

Even after the days of the Vikings and of William the Conqueror and, incidentally, of Harold the Saxon, this habit persisted. Cromwell was English and the Stuarts had some English blood, but after them the English let a Dutchman, William of Orange, be their ruler for years, and ten years or so after he died they imported another alien monarch, a foreigner who couldn't even speak English, and worse still, didn't want to. He was a German named George. He went over to England from Hanover with two large and rude German mistresses, leaving his wife at home jailed in an old castle where he kept her locked up. He gave English titles to his mistresses and got all the English money he could and kept going back to Lanover to invest it. He was a sort of visiting king. If transportation had been better he would have spent only his weekends in England.

WE have many more foreigners in this country than they have in England and we have usually made it quite easy for them to be citizens. There is only one place in America, the White House, where the law forbids them to live. In England a foreigner has a harder time becoming a citizen, but if he is the right man he has very little trouble in becoming a king.

Crime and the Weather

—By Aldous Huxley—

LONDON—That the physical climate has some influence on the inward weather of the mind is obvious. We have all experienced the depression which comes of long weeks of wintry sunlessness; the exhilaration, the sense of abundant life imparted by the brightness of a Spring morning; the lassitude of thundery afternoons in Summer. Every convalescent knows the stimulating and curative effects of change of air; and, moving from place to place every traveler has felt himself responding in a variety of ways to the influence of varying climatic conditions. Statistics prove that even suicides prefer certain months for cutting their throats; and though there is no closed season for crime, an off-season definitely exists. Without any doubt the human organism is a kind of barometer.

The trouble is that it is a very funny kind of barometer. With an aneroid or a column of mercury you know exactly where you are: similar causes will produce similar effects. But not with the human instrument. Where one man will rise, another will fall; and, at different times, the person will respond in different ways to fundamentally identical meteorological stimuli. Man is affected by so many internal and external forces besides the weather that it is very difficult to decide where the influence of meteorology begins or ends. As a scientific study, what I may call Human Meteorology is hardly further advanced today than it was 300 years ago, when Burton wrote his famous "Digression of Air" in "The Anatomy of Melancholy."

Change Acts on Them

THE most recent attempt to correlate character and weather comes from the University of Cincinnati, whose Professor of Experimental Medicine, Dr. C. A. Mills, has formulated the theory that crime is to a great extent, a product of weather. According to Dr. Mills, wide and rapid fluctuations of weather tend to produce an abundance of human energy. "Great problems have arisen in America as a result of immigration by millions from lands of lower climatic energy into our very energizing storm area. It has been the very marked increase in physical energy of the children and descendants of this immigrant stock, without a corresponding increase of social inhibitions, which has brought to the United States some very serious social problems"—the problems of wholesale crime.

I am ready to believe that this theory contains an element of truth. But how much truth? That is the question. Dr. Mills seems to evade the problem. He talks of crimes being committed by the children of immigrants, in whom the weather has generated increased energy, without a corresponding increase of social inhibitions. But once you admit the efficacy of social inhibitions, where are you going to stop?

Must Try Again

IT MIGHT be argued that crime in the Middle West has nothing to do with the local weather, but with the breakdown in an unfamiliar environment of the traditional taboos which, in the old continent, had kept the immigrants virtuous. History makes it abundantly clear that social traditions can cause a rise or a fall in the criminality of people of the same stock, subjected to the same climate conditions.

The English are now a mild and law-abiding people. There is no reason to suppose that the climate of England has perceptibly changed during the last thousand years. And yet the English were once notoriously brutal and criminal.

Dr. Mills will have to invent a technique for measuring the parts played, in any given psychological drama, by the weather and "social inhibitions" respectively. Until he can do this his theory must remain unfruitful.

The Sighs Have It!

MY LADY'S sighs—were ever slyer
Spurs devised to good desire?
For them I gallop into verse
And heated compliments disburse
From my acclaimator's lyre!

I think that I shall never tire
Of listening to her suspire;
Of course, hot kisses intersperse
My lady's sighs!

She's such a sympathetic sigher
This model maiden I admire
I really shouldn't be averse
To wedding her (she and her purse!);
There's just one thing that damps my fire:
My lady's size!

Good Books and Bad Books

—By Guglielmo Ferrero—

GENEVA—A few days ago I went to Paris to see publishers and discuss with them the publication of the books left by my beloved son Leo who died last August in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Naturally I heard many complaints of the present state of business. "The book trade is at a standstill. People no longer read or buy books."

This was the same complaint that I had heard in 1931 in the United States. Suddenly in the midst of all these lamentations a singular remark struck me. A publisher said:

"We sell very little now except serious books."

"You don't say so!" I cried. "That at least is good news among so much that is bad, if the crisis has caused fewer bad books and more serious ones to be read."

FOR that is the real problem. For thirty years I have heard publishers, booksellers, critics and philosophers lamenting that people no longer read! But how is it possible to shut one's eyes so completely to reality as not to see that people have never read so much as in the last thirty years?

Think of it! Every day the public in all western countries devour the morning and evening papers. And there are plenty of these, even in the poorest and least educated countries. Then every week there are the weekly papers whose name is legion. And every month there are the reviews. If all these daily, weekly and monthly papers are published it means that they find readers.

LASTLY there are the books. Even in these years of crisis at least ten times more books are published every year than a century ago.

It is absurd to say that people no longer read. The truth is that they began reading fifty years ago. A century ago a very small number of people read, even in the richest and most cultured countries. Now everybody in all classes of society reads. But the disadvantage of our epoch is that they read too much, too hurriedly, books too different in quality, without distinguishing between the good, the mediocre and the bad.

The enormous production in the book market, as in all markets, brings about a feverish, superficial, undiscerning consumption. Now a consumption which is unable to distinguish the good from the bad is more dangerous in the case of books than in that of fruit or boots. For books may be the vehicle of intellectual and moral diseases which are sometimes very dangerous.

ALL political, economical and social crises have their good side, for they are the consequence of errors we have committed and they oblige us to correct them. If the depression the world is passing through lessens somewhat the tumultuous productions of books and reduces the number of bad books which seek for immediate success by flattering the vices and errors of the masses, the sufferings it has inflicted on the world will be useful in the end.

People have learned or have accustomed themselves to read; they need no more urging in that direction. What they need is to learn to read better books than they do at present, with more discernment; to enjoy books which will serve not only to pass an hour or two pleasantly but will enrich their minds, as did the rare readers of former days.

The Lamplighter

WHEN twilight drops its spangled veil
The soul of one looks down
Who used to go about at dusk
And light the lamps in town;
Beneath his touch the golden rays
Illumined every street
Until the midnight ways were bright
And safe for passing feet.

An old and humble man, he held
His task a sacred trust,
And never failed to make his rounds;
His bones have long been dust,
But when I see the stars appear
In sapphire spaces far,
To guide our souls to Heaven I think
He lights each shining star.

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

M. JULES JUSSERAND was the most popular Ambassador ever sent to this country by France, or any other country. He lived in what is now known as the golden years of diplomacy, and in his unfinished memoirs—death overtook him just before he was to write the final chapters—he gives us a picture of his life in America during the Theodore Roosevelt regime that is full of sparkle and life and humor. The volume is called "What Me Befell!" (Houghton-Mifflin).

Roosevelt admired Jusserand. They had long talks on every conceivable subject. Jusserand, in turn, admired our President with something akin to idolatry. T. R. would open up his heart to the Frenchman. At luncheon one day he told him that the "Iliad" bored him. "Those Greeks, those Trojans who run after one another around the walls, talk away and never reach any result except with the help of the gods, are in my eyes of no interest. Speak to me of the Sagas and the Nibelungen; there you see real heroes; death is in their eyes and they continue to fight, making the best of it, until the last minute."

The French Ambassadress asked him if he had read the "Song of Roland." He had not. "There," she said, "you would find as much valor and more poetry." "Have you a copy?" the President said, turning to Jusserand, "the original text and a translation?" "Yes, I have." "Then send it to me, please, tomorrow morning without fail."

And Roosevelt, who could absorb a book in little time, began to quote from the "Song of Roland" on every occasion. He soon knew it by heart.

Jusserand was admitted to the "tennis Cabinet." He was as good an athlete as Roosevelt, and they took long and arduous walks together, never going around an obstacle, but in the true Roosevelitan way, through it. On these pilgrimages they would talk again, as though they were around a dinner-table, and the friendship ripened into a close intimacy.

Not a celebrity came to our shores but Roosevelt asked immediately to meet him. He even had Dowie, the founder of Zion City, at the White House—the Dowie who called himself a Prophet, and hoped to convert the wicked city of New York. But our President was always interested in people. Great generals and sports alike were at home with him. His memory for names and faces was astonishing, and even after a long interval he would not forget how to address the most humble politician.

THE first Summer Jusserand was in America he spent much time at Manchester-by-the-Sea, but he was not idle. He was able to finish the second volume of his "Literary History of the English People," carrying it as far as the Civil War; likewise he visited manufacturing towns like Lawrence, Lynn, and even Gloucester. He studied housing conditions, and made a thorough investigation of economic conditions in our country.

The great friendship of Hay and Roosevelt is spoken of. "Mr. Hay was a rare mind, a wide intelligence with windows open on all the avenues of life, a large acquaintance with men and books, a gifted writer in prose and verse; modest withal, never trying to push himself to the front, speaking in subdued tones and scarcely opening his lips when uttering a memorable saying or a shrewd, humorous remark. President Roosevelt and he delighted in each other's company in those intimate conversations in which we sometimes took part; the President called his secretary John, and the secretary called his chief Theodore."

But Hay fought Roosevelt on his trust-busting campaign. And sometimes Hay was not as diplomatic as others would have been in the same circumstances. He was possibly well disposed toward France, extremely well toward England, very averse to Germany.

When Hay died in 1905 he was mourned from the depth of his heart by Roosevelt. Innumerable letters had been written by Hay to the President, and Jusserand was called in to talk over the advisability of publishing them. There were ironical comments in many of these epistles. They were full of wit, with perhaps more vivacity than force. Jusserand suggested reserve; there were not many letters in which the Secretary did not ridicule somebody, and so Jusserand advised that no letter should be printed which the author himself would not have liked to have published.

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME—Dear Mussolini: Would you mind shaking the cares of the world from your shoulders for a few minutes and listen to a few grievances of mine? I'm living here in Rome, I'm a neighbor of yours. Whenever I manage to get home for dinner I have to pass the palace where you are earning your board and lodging. From my window I can see the same big monument that you can see. (Sometimes it gives me a pain. How do you feel about it?)

You are doing great work. And achieving results. Your word is law here. I want to be a friendly neighbor. I know you're busy, but if I want to borrow your lawn-mower can't you tell your gardener that it's O. K.? That's just a hypothetical question, of course, because I haven't any lawn. What I mean is, can't you meet me half way? If you ever run short of beer, baloney, cigarettes or anything else that I've got you need only telephone or send the cook over. I always have the latest Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping and Harper's Bazar and as soon as Mrs. has cut out some recipes and patterns you're welcome to them. I'm terribly neighborly.

BUT, I've got a radio set in your bedroom house and they won't give it to me. It's one that Dave Sarnoff gave me and I'm hungry for music. The customs people told me I must pay duty on it and I said, "For heaven's sake tell me how much duty to pay and I'll pay it." And they said I must wait. I've waited two weeks. Every day a committee meets and discusses that radio. Is there no way of having that committee shot?

Likes the French

I'VE got a birthday party coming along and would like to get a couple of bottles of French champagne to celebrate. Your Italian still wines are wonderful, but you champagnes are lacely nix. I find that if I want to send to France for a few bottles of champagne I must first apply for a license. I must fill out papers. Above all, I must wait.

In order to get my books and bed and tea and coffee and food and couch sachets that I send down from St. Cloud I had to fill out papers. I had to give the name of my grandfather and grandmother. (I'm afraid I wrote down Ford Frye in the latter name but am willing to rectify it.) And I had to wait.

Whenever I want to do anything I have to fill out papers and wait. And now I ask you, Benito, to have a heart, say the word and make them cut out all the silly red tape. Because you are one of the few men in the world who can do it. I ask for no favors accepting that my time be not wasted and that my nerves be spared.

A Word to Ll Duce

THIS, dear reader, income-tax evader, fellow-Americans and good scouts of all nations, may seem like a silly message to send to such a busy man as Mussolini. Especially as none of the grievances that I have enumerated really worries me. I have lived long enough to be accustomed to life and to accept it as it is. But underneath my feeble complaint, if you will take the trouble to think about it, you will detect what the philosophers call a "causation." Something is wrong with the world when the more you think about it the more you will realize that you, too, are affected by some of the things I've mentioned. Even if it is too much plaster-of-Paris red tape in the way!

Incidentally you do not have to bother about the two greatest events in your life, viz., your birth and your death. The red tape involved in those two occurrences is inflicted upon others. Between those two periods, however, all your contacts as an individual with a government involve filling out papers and waiting.

It takes time and trouble to get married. It takes time and trouble to make out your income tax report. After you've made it out the government doesn't believe you and starts to investigate. When you come to American customs barriers, they make you fill out a statement and swear to it. After that they open your baggage to see if you have lied. In the meantime, you wait.

Live on Red Tape

AND I'll tell you why. Nobody is in a hurry excepting you. And me. The business of all governments is conducted by what they call "public officials." These "public officials" have a sense of personal dignity. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred—and this applies to all countries—they are not identity mixed up with that of the government. The thought that most rarely disturbs them is that you—and I—are paying their wages. They feed on red tape. If they hurried and got through with their work there would be nothing for them to do.

Just now this batch of parasites upon the public purse is looming in importance because countries are having trouble in balancing their budgets. In democracies like U. S. A., England and France it is difficult to lop them off because they have votes. New York city alone could get along splendidly by dropping fifty thousand of them. Washington, D. C., could snare a few hundred thousands. But then there would be the devil to pay at the next election.

Mussolini, however, is not hampered by such worries. He could easily issue orders that would give an object lesson to the whole world, viz., to run government bureaus as an intelligent man runs his private business.

Jellies to Be Made in Winter

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

LUCKY IS THE family that still enjoys the pleasures of a fruit closet. It is really thrilling to look over the rows and rows of jellies, jams, marmalades, conserves, pickled peaches, brandied peaches and all that sort of thing.

However, if you are just out of fruit closets—or have gone modern efficiently in a smart apartment, there is no need for you to go without jam.

Tuck yourself into a large apron and turn domestic with ease. The fruit pectin we speak about in the following recipes is an Aladdin'- lamp method to jellies that jell—and marmslades that do not need first aid treatment after they are cooked.

ORANGE, GRAPEFRUIT AND LEMON MARMALADE

3 cups (1½ lbs.) prepared citrus fruit
6 cups (2 lbs. 10 oz.) sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

Use 1 orange, 1 grapefruit and 1 lemon. To prepare fruit, remove skins in quarters. Lay quarters flat, shave off and discard about ⅛ of white part. With a very sharp knife cut remaining rind into shreds 1-16 inch thick or less. Add 1¼ cups water and ¼ tsp. soda. Bring to a boil and simmer, covered, for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cut off tight skin of peeled fruit with sharp knife, and slip pulp out of each section. Add pulp and juice to cooked rind. Simmer, covered, 20 minutes longer.

DRIED FIG JAM

3 cups (1¾ lbs.) prepared fruit
6 cups (2¾ lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit add 2 cups water and juice of 1 lemon to ¾ lb. stemmed stewing figs. Cover and let stand 4 hours or overnight. Drain fruit, grind or chop fine, and mix with juice.

Measure sugar into large kettle, add prepared fruit, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well and bring to a full, rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove the kettle from the fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Skim; pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 9 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

BANANA BUTTER (Delicious cake filling)

3 cups (1½ lbs.) banana pulp
6½ cups (2¾ lbs. sugar
¼ tsp. butter
Juice of 1 lemon
1 bottle fruit pectin

Use only mellow ripe bananas. Crush to a fine pulp. Put crushed fruit into large kettle and add sugar, butter and lemon juice. Mix and bring to a full, rolling boil over hottest fire, stirring constantly. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in the fruit pectin. Pour quickly. Cover hot butter with film of hot paraffin; when butter is cold cover with ⅛ inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Requires 10 bananas and makes 10 8-ounce glasses.

DRIED APRICOT JAM

4 cups (3 lbs.) crushed cooked fruit and juice
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Add water to washed fruit and let stand four hours or overnight. Simmer, covered, 30 minutes. Drain fruit, crush thoroughly, and mix with juice. Measure fruit into large kettle. Add sugar, mix, and bring to full rolling boil over hot fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in the fruit pectin. Skim. Pour quickly. Cover hot jam with film of hot paraffin; when jam is cold, cover with ⅛ inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Requires ¾ lb. apricots and 3½ cups water. Makes 11 eight-ounce glasses.

The Small Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am to be married very soon at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. I have chosen the parsonage for the ceremony. The wedding will be very informal, attended only by my immediate relatives, my mother, my aunt and two cousins. None of my fiance's family will be present.

What I wish to know is, how should we go to the parsonage? It is just around the corner from my home. As we are having no attendants, shall my relatives arrive at the parsonage before my fiance and myself? Or should I go with my mother, and should my husband-to-be come by himself? Or should we all go together?

2. After the ceremony there will be dinner in my home. Is it necessary to invite the minister and his wife? S.

1. The best way would be for you to plan to have the group meet at the parsonage. You and your mother would come together. Your fiance and his best man would come together. And your aunt and your cousins would come together.

2. Under these circumstances it will not be necessary for you wife to the dinner.

Lavishing Undue Affection Can Alienate Children, Not Draw Them Closer

By Lisa Grenelle

"WHEN TOM ran away with that other woman," a friend told me a few days ago, "Mary used to say, 'Well, I've got the children to live for.' But the tragic thing was that the children didn't turn out very well, either. Ungrateful, selfish little things, who left their poor mother as soon as they were able."

The world abounds with "poor Marys," deserted by both husband and children. But "poor Mary's" children leave her at the first opportunity, not because life is cruel and hard, but because "poor Mary" has not been honest with herself. Instead of "living for their children," as they suppose they are doing, these "poor Marys" are making their children live for them.

SUBSTITUTING LOVE

"Something to love?" What poor Mary had to have was something to serve as a substitute for the unfaithful Tom, and as an outlet for her own emotions. But no one, not even a child, likes to be just an outlet for anything, not even love. Too much cherishing can smother a child just as surely as too little ca starve it.

Can a child then be loved too much? Most certainly he can, if that possessive dependence is what you choose to call love. It is as easy to kiss your child when you want to kiss him, rather than when he wants to kiss you. So easy to expend your disappointment upon him. There is always a good excuse, and the child won't protest until much later—when you have already lost him.

MOTHER ONLY JUDGE

No one will blame you immediately. Who would criticize a mother for embracing her child? Who pretend to judge whether the sharp scolding you give him is really deserved, or merely an outlet to your own temper? Only you can judge.

Don't use your child as an emotional outlet. Don't live for him, or insist that he live for you. Each should live his own life independent of the other, but strengthened, comforted, enriched and vitalized by the most easily misused of all human relationships.

Topping the Evening Mode

The buttons are silver set with rhinestones

Mme. Mephisto, perhaps, the lady above. Anyway, her newest of all new evening wraps is distinctly dramatic, made of black Lyons velvet in a tightly fitted coat from which flares a full length back cape.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

No matter where parties are held these bright nights, the journey thither involves a Peacock Alley gauntlet, and the result is the most varied line of lovely evening wraps that fashion has seen for some time.

The ford that is so good that it does not look like one is the Chesterfield effect in stiff black velvet. Everyone has one of those, no matter what else her budget has permitted.

Just as attractive is the Red Riding Hood sort of wrap, with its long, slim coat and deep hood that can be worn over the coiffure or thrown back to hang as a cowl. But this is a model for the youngish girl, whereas the Chesterfield knows no birthdays.

Portis would have approved another type of wrap which is proving popular. It has the conceited tubular lines, but it is given a lot of swank by long bishop sleeves, draped from a drop shoulder. The jabot collar of this model folds over close to the chin, and in it a woman looks mysteriously and alluringly concealed.

To Melt Chocolate

To melt chocolate, use low temperatures. The best method is to put squares of chocolate in top of double boiler and let them melt slowly over boiling water.

To remove the lumps from powdered or brown sugar, spread the sugar on a molding board and crush with rolling pin; sift, and return the lumps in the sifter to the board to be rerolled.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Cultivated speech requires using all vowels with respect, and ignoring none of the consonants. A "stiff upper lip" is an admirable character trait, but it does not make for clear enunciation. Speech is an exacting art which requires accurate lip movement.

Not Robins—Prints Hail Spring

(Authentic last-minute fashions from New York—the style center of America)

By Victoria Gaines

FIRST SIGNS of spring in the fashion world are not, in the pretty poetic manner, the first robin or the first primrose, but the first spring fabrics. And they are just as apt to appear in a winter blizzard as in a spring breeze, for fabrics forecast spring fashions by many months.

This season, fabrics seem to promise spring fashions a long life and a merry one, for they are all bright, cheerful affairs without the slightest suggestion of the sombreness which shadowed so many materials last season.

BRIGHT DARK PRINTS

Printed silks manage to be both bright and dark at the same time, because of their gay light patterns against dark backgrounds. Very few prints have not a fresh, flowery design in some form or other—a white snowdrop against a black satin ground, a cherry-red cluster of blossoms on a blue crepe ground, or those interesting penline prints —fantastic leaves and flowers outlined by a bold stroke of the pen. Some are plaids, some are striped, but the smartest prints of all are designed on diagonal lines.

Dress woolens are largely the lightweight basketweaves in the novelty plaids and checks that make up such nice spring suits or separate jackets. Cotton is King, however, when it comes to fabrics for southern wear now and summer wear later.

CRINKLED COTTONS

Every cotton is crinkled and puckered this season, from the crinkled organdy for your collar and cuff sets to the seersucker cottons for whole suits and frocks. Seersuckers, by the way, are headed for even greater success this season than last, in striped or checked effects. And cotton shirtings in multi-colored stripes are going over for sports frocks.

When it comes to heavier cottons, look before you leap into linens, for they're usually cottons with a linen-like finish or weave. Piques, too, are hand picked favorites of this year's cotton crop.

Blue is generally agreed upon as the big color news in spring styles. It is smart in all shades—navy blue, royal blue, and a few lighter blues of a violet cast. Beige will be the next best bet, and greens are coming up from the bottom of the color card where they have lurked so long. Black and white, as usual, will be a favored spring color combination with smart women the world over.

Elastic Seam That Saves Slips

You need no longer fear an insidious, soft r-r-r-rip when you bend over, indicating that the seams of your slip have parted company. A Boston shop is showing a crepe and lace fitted slip whose seams carry a narrow insertion of lastex, and you know how lastex gives!

If you are a very active, busy person, you have probably felt that life is too complicated when one favorite slip after another gives in to your restless movements, and joins the march to the rag bag. The lastex seam will save patience and lingerie money. It is flat, and won't show even with a skin-tight gown.

"Baby Pants" and Plaided Hankie Linen Top

Canary yellow ribbed wool, lined, makes the newest beach vogue, "Baby Pants."

A Delphinium blue plaid handkerchief linen removable top may be worn with the bathing trunks or with shorts.

It has a Halter neck, two ends that cross in back, very low, and buckle in front. A Boston shop shows the set. Write to Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, or phone her at LIB. 4000, if you would like to know where.

Get Arm Beauty While You Sleep

By Therese Deschamps

SOFTLY ROUNDED, dimpled white elbows. What woman doesn't admire and long for them!

But many elbows are so disillusioning . . . rough and calloused . . . discolored . . . chapped and red. Even the most lovely new evening frock and all the family jewels can't make a gal look queenly and radiant at a party—if her elbows are dingy. There's no way to hide them when wearing a sleeveless gown—though some arm joints seem to simply beg for a covering. The unlucky owner doesn't need to look at them, of course—but the one behind her can and does.

Maybe your elbows are still calloused from elbowing your way through the pre-Christmas shopping crowds — or perhaps you've simply been neglecting them these last few months. Elbows must be included in your daily "skin care" program.

Elbows that haven't had the benefit of daily creamings, and their share of soothing lotions and bleaching preparations frequently are unsightly. They're discolored, rough or actually horny—not an attractive sight to anyone behind you. Some of them look as though they'd missed their daily soap and water scrubbings with the aid of a good bath brush. I wonder if they have . . .

Regular applications of your favorite mild bleach will whiten the skin. Whenever you use a soothing lotion or cream on your hands, don't forget to rub a bit into your elbows, too. It only takes a minute, y'know.

Then don't forget to include your elbows in your 10 minutes before-going-to-bed beautifying. Massage a bit of nourishing cream or skin food into them, or an ultra-rich cream if they are thin and bony looking. That's a good time to apply a bleaching cream also, if you need one.

I've just discovered some grand elbow straps here in Boston. They are exceptionally well-fitting and used at night will help keep the elbows smooth and free from wrinkles. They are made of porous material with an inner rubber pad. Fastened on after you've patted cream or lotion on your elbows at night they'll keep the preparation from soiling the sheets while you sleep your way to arm beauty.

Want to know where to find these grand new elbow straps? I can't mention trade names in this column, but I'll gladly send you this information upon receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Nothing depresses an attractive man so much as to discover that he has reached the age when all the girls under 25 are beginning to regard him as a confidante and use him as a "spare."

Helen Rowland

The best thing about most foolish marriages—and most of the present-day foolish styles—is the beautiful thought that they won't last long.

Every new bridegroom has to master the domestic sign manual during the first year of marriage; otherwise he may drive his wife to first-degree murder by his "What-have-I-done-now?" look every time she kicks him under the table.

Emotional appeal is something that every woman fancies she possesses, until she tries to use it to persuade her husband to stay away from a prize-fight and take her to a bridge party.

If a man only knew when he had enough money or enough women in his life and a woman only knew when she'd had enough admiration and romance, most of the heart-breaks and suicides in this world could be avoided.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

What should be the arrangement between young married couples as regards the subject of washing the dishes. Now I'm willing and even glad to help my wife, inasmuch as we have no maid at the present time. That goes for most of the time, but often I come home from the office feeling like an old dish cloth myself, and the prospect of stacks of china are enough to make me want to leave for the Orient.

I claim that when one of us feels badly it's only right that the other one should shoulder the work, but my wife is full of these modern ideas about fifty-fifty basis, et cetera, and insists that there shall be no slacking. Do you think this is fair?

OVERWORKED.

DEAR OVERWORKED:

I think your wife must be an extremely narrow person to interpret that fifty-fifty basis arrangement in such a manner. She is quite evidently an ardent feminist, but is carrying the thing much too far.

The whole idea of any happy marriage is that each person shall do his or her share and have an equal amount of the fun. When one of you doesn't feel well, the other should not take the point of view that he's being taken advantage of, for nothing is more disrupting to any young couple. Forget this idea of counting your hours of work, and remember that it's your job—both of you—to give everything you've got . . . all the time . . . for the sake of the other.

Show this to her, brother, but be sure the plates are stacked before you do.

PANDORA.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Eye Shadow

Question: I have green eyes. What shade eye shadow do you think would be most flattering? —Miss C. H., Somerville.

Answer: While medium green paste is often suggested for the green-eyed, why not try brown or one of the other shades? You might get attractive results by blending a bit of brown and green shadow together.

Perfume

Question: I'm tired of the perfume I've been using the last few months. I'm a vivacious brunette. Can you suggest a fascinating new scent for me to use? I prefer a light floral one, instead of a heavy perfume. Thank you.—Mrs. D. D., Boston.

Answer: There are some lovely new scents in the Boston shops at present. I've made a list of a few of them, with a short descriptive phrase to help you with your selection. I'll be glad to mail it to you upon receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Please repeat your question. It's nice to change perfume occasionally—one does get tired of the same fragrance day after day—and many perfume manufacturers put out their products in small bottles so trying out several until you find just the right one isn't a costly procedure—and it's lots of fun.

The Medicine Your Mother and Your Grandmother Depended On

LUCILLE WATSON SUPERB in "No More Ladies" at Plymouth

Her Grandma Impersonation in A. E. Thomas' Comedy One of Stage's Best Roles

By GEORGE HOLLAND

First, a salute to Lucille Watson, probably the most important expatriate to forsake the capitals of Europe since Repeal, although there is no significance in the coincidence that I know about. She etches a character of benignity and beauty from a part written with a bit of showmanly charlatanry by that astute playwright, A. E. Thomas. Miss Watson's extreme skill makes this role the best thing of its kind since Haidee Wright did a grandma part in "The Royal Family." No one in America, not excepting Marie Dressler, who will probably get the role in pictures eventually, could do better as Mrs. Fanny Townsend in "No More Ladies," at the Plymouth. "No More Ladies," of course, is the main subject, the play being the thing of this er—essay.

But the play, for the moment, be derned. I am thinking of two earnest, valiant young troupers, one male, and one female, and named respectively Melvyn Douglas and Ruth Weston, who carry the brunt and burden of this very, very funny comedy, and carry it well and engagingly and have nothing at all to worry about. Miss Weston is not "billed," that is her name does not appear in larger type advertising matter than those of her mates. So she must concern herself only with becoming perfect in her part of Lucille Watson's lovely granddaughter, Marcia Townsend, which she nearly is

Melvyn Douglas

The case of Mr. Douglas is more involved. He is the featured player of this very, very funny comedy (O. K.), and his name appears over that of Miss Watson. What of it, asks you. I am thinking of two weeks hence when "No More Ladies" moves to Manhattan, a neat profit in the bank through its Boston engagement and a fortune at stake for its producer, Mr. Lee Shubert, and its author. And, of course, steady work for its cast.

Magic of Her Acting

Already harried by a wide awareness on the part of the public that he played opposite Garbo in pictures, Mr. Douglas can hurdle his biggest obstacle by begging Mr. Shubert to subordinate his name to that of Miss Watson—its billing. The part, perhaps unwittingly is built that way. Whatever Mr. Douglas does about it, the most sheer value, through the magic of Miss Watson's playing and the writing of her role, large as you from the words, the gestures and the movements of Grandma Fannie Townsend. I have yet to read that way, but that is how it comes over the footlights.

An unknown young girl named Katharine Hepburn, one of the biggest box-office stars at the movies and known to you in the world, went back to Broadway two weeks ago in a play called "The Lake." And was panned. In smaller type appeared the names of Blanche Bates and Frances Starr, both of whom, years older in experience, can out-act Miss Hepburn. Those old elephants write pieces on the theater for their publics never forget. Miss Hepburn of the stage has become "our most promising young actress"

I submit this with an apology for my presumption and my digression from the task at hand.

A Neat Setting

The curtain rise discloses a modernistic drawing-room in the New York home of Grandma Townsend's son, daughter-in-law and granddaughter, and the fine hand of one of our best stage directors, Harry Wagstaff Gribble. Out of what resembles at first a circular mirror, amazingly concave, or a oblique aquarium, inhabited by large, many-hued fishes. It's a neat effect.

Playwright Thomas goes right to work on an audience. Miss Watson hasn't spoken ten lines, wearing a pompadoured coiffure of greyish-white and Mauve Decade throughout in costume, when a large, round oath—dropped with a lustiness that makes Ethel Barrymore look faint—drops from her lips. She is listening to the plaint of a very proper young man from Wall st. (you heard me) who doesn't approve of Marcia Townsend's friendliness with a heart breaker named Sheridan Warren. You distinctly will not like the young man from Wall st., played by Bradley Cass and you will as definitely become attached to Mr. Warren, the Douglas part.

Gaddy Young Modern

Grandma Townsend likes Sheridan Warren, too, and he holds the end of her ball of yarn while she knits and smokes and sips a Scotch and soda. Granddaughter Marcia Townsend is a gaddy young modern, whom we soon learn is suffering from love pangs for Sheridan in his past, a certain Mrs. Ralston has figured prominently. But he has gotten away from that bachelorhood defense by proposing for on an English earl, and we do not learn until later that Mr. Ralston has been in the habit of proposing which he does as an impersonation of Clifton Webb doing his duck-foot number.

first Mr. Ralston, and returns to a brooding husband with a none-of-your business attitude. Grandma Townsend, in a very horsey dissertation, straightens the young 'uns out. "No More Ladies" is easily the best "smart" comedy of the season, in my opinion.

Splendidly Staged

Mr. Gribble has excelled even himself in the staging and direction." I suspect also that he has done a bit of effective, if minor, collaboration, a gag or two in the third act sharpening my suspicions.

To earn my gratitude on my next appearance, he will, with a hickory stick if necessary, make his actors desist from that irksome, phony style of being too, too nonchalant, with a rising inflection on the last syllable. Pretty soon audiences will hoot any instance of it. And I wish Mr. Thomas would snip every "sham melodrama" scene from his play. Even Coward must be handled about these affectations he fosted on America.

Paramount Gives Contract to Player Borrowed From Radio for "All of Me"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service.

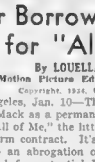
Los Angeles, Jan. 10—The sleek-haired George Raft is to have Helen Mack as a permanent leading lady. Borrowed from radio for "All of Me," the little Mack remains on at Paramount on a long term contract. It's all legitimate, of course. Radio consented to an abrogation of Miss Mack's contract and now she is headed for potential Paramount stardom, with George Raft as her screen Romeo.

One of the cutest looking youngsters in Hollywood, Miss Mack was brought out here three years ago by Fox. She and the Fox company just didn't get together. She did fairly well at Radio but Paramount is now urging the world to watch her smoke. You can see her for yourself in "It's a Pleasure to Lose," a Charles Rogers opera, starring Louella O. Parsons George Raft as Nick the Greek



Will Rogers might as well tell the home folk in Claremore, Oklahoma, that he won't be seeing them for a while. Under that new contract with Fox Winfield Sheehans lined up a program that will keep the gum-chewing philosopher busy right in Hollywood. As soon as Will finishes trading hosses in "David Harum" he will show the world how a small town druggist in action sells his patent medicines. That's the character Lewis Beach describes in "Merry Andrews," a Rogers story now being adapted by Rubee Glasmore for production under Sol Wurtzel's supervising eye.

While Kay Francis is knee-deep in literature on "Du Barry" in New York she is giving Josephine, divorced wife of Napoleon, a nod, too. Seems that while the Warners were in conference and talking Katharine Cornell for the empress a few hundred suggestions came into the office asking why not Kay Francis. So it is to be Edward Robinson and Kay Francis again. By the time Eddie gets through buying books on Napoleon and Kay listens to all her friends on Josephine's characteristics there ought to be a very interesting picture as the result.

Active rumors over the weekend that Pickfair, the home of Mary Pickford, has been rented. Pickfair, much talked about as Finland's royal mansion during the days when Douglas Fairbanks was just entertaining royalty we reported yesterday. A New York society woman, Rolled down and discussed with those who know, this is the attraction. Ing February Mrs. Frelinghuysen, New York socialite; Margery Gelrichs, also importantly connected with the New York elite, and Grand Duke Dimitri and his wife, will be Miss Pickford's guests at Pickfair even though the chatelaine is absent. Mary, who is packing them into the theaters, opens in Boston with her act January 19.

Well, the Cotton Club in the wee sma' hours seems to be the place if you want to know what's keeping company with whom. Sooner or later they all wander in to hear the four Mills brothers, Lou Holtz and Helen Vinson who are doing a lot of gazing into each other's eyes these winter evenings, are regular attendants. Marion Nixon escorted by Wesley Ruggles was in a ringside seat the same night. As for Howard Strickling and W. S. Van Dine, well, these two stopped the show when they walked in with two cuties from "The Gentle White Scandals." The girls, Lou Eckhart and Hilda Knight, are something to look at, and do Howard and Bill know it?

I never knew it to fail in this film industry of ours that the announcement of one picture leads to two of a kind. So no more than got the words out of my mouth that Fox would do "Fledglings," a story of a training flying school, than along comes Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with plans for "West Point of the Air," another training school yarn which Monte Bell is to produce for them. Interesting that Peter Finley Dunne's son, Philip Dunne, is the author. If put end to end the yarns about Peter Finley Dunne, newspaperman and author, would almost circle the globe and all of them really good copy.

The Jean Harlow-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer controversy is still very much on. Jean is refusing to return to work unless she is paid more money. So far the powers that be at MGM have been adamant in refusing to change her contract. The underground rumor on the MGM lot is that her stepfather, Mario Bello, who advises her in many of her affairs, has urged her to hold out for $10,000 a week. This sounds a little incredible, inasmuch as not every star in town is paid that amount. Be that as it may, no preparations are on for a June wedding until a compromise is effected. MGM hold a five year contract with the platinum blonde, and cannot legally make a picture elsewhere.

Hollywood, Jan. 10—W. C. Fields thinks George Burns must be Scotch

"Dost you ever smoke a pipe?" Fields inquired.

"No," replied George. "If you smoke a pipe you are bothered by one of two things. If you smoke your own tobacco you worry about the cost. If you smoke your friends' tobacco your pipe is always stuck so hard it won't draw."

Blame Mrs. Bill Gargan—but don't be too harsh with her—if it seems that every time you turn on your radio you hear somebody singing or playing "Little Grey Shark."

When Mr. Gargan and Bill were in Bermuda with the Four Fingered Flush company she heard the tune and liked it

She brought a copy back with her and gave it to Ted Fio-Rita and it spread faster than the hoof-and-mouth disease

Remarkable sense of President Roosevelt appearing before and addressing the 73rd Congress are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's State. There are impressive views in the House as congressmen and senators give the nation's Chief Executive a tumultuous greeting. The gallery is shown filled to overflowing with the elite of Washington. High light of the President's speech are then heard as he declares that the new Deal is here to stay. Also in detail on the work of recovery and pleads for a new social order.

RUDY'S LAWYER SPEEDS TO BARE FAY'S SECRETS

New York Jan 10 (AP) Rudy Vallee's New York attorneys will attempt to quash the suit for separate maintenance brought in Los Angeles by his wife, Fay Webb, on grounds that she is a legal resident of this state and that the California courts thus have no jurisdiction in their marital difficulties, it has been revealed.

While former Magistrate Hyman Eushel, Vallee's chief counsel, was en route to Los Angeles with the papers in Mrs. Vallee's New York suit, the situation was explained by Samuel Gottlieb Bushel's partner Gottlieb explained

"When Mrs. Vallee brought her action in the Supreme Court, she stated in her petition that her New York citizenship was of paramount importance in any court action between herself and her husband.

"Bushel in taking the court records to California to be incorporated in his petition to have the California suit deferred at least until the matter here is disposed of.

"Her action in California is an affront to the New York court."

Whether or not Vallee's suit is entitled to reply to the separate maintenance suit with a divorce plea of his own is being debated. Not a legal resident of California he would be compelled to remain there for a year before filing an independent divorce complaint, but whether or not the separate maintenance suit ends the way for a cross complaint, as it would if it were a divorce filing, was to be decided.

The first court skirmish of the legal battle will be fought on January 17, when Vallee's attorneys will appear in court and show cause why they should not be restrained from paying Vallee's salary pending the hearing of the separate maintenance suit.

ROXBURY PLANS BIGGEST YEAR

Hailing an all-Roxbury program of activities for the coming year, nearly 100 business and professional men attended the January luncheon of the Roxbury Board of Trade. Judge Frankland W. L. Miles, incoming president, acted as toastmaster.

Prof. Leo Drew O'Neil of Boston University, the main speaker, using as his topic "Solons Dollars—and Other Kinds of Dollars," sounded a note of confidence in President Roosevelt's program.

Patrick Connolly, president of the Dorchester Board of Trade and vice-chairman of the industrial trades division of the Emergency Relief, explained the aims of this great drive

A tribute was given to Price Ferdinand, vice-president of the Board of Trade, for work in refurnishing and decorating the Board of Trade headquarters at 144 Dudley st.

A drive to increase membership in the board of trade was launched Bert D. Turnquist spoke on "Cooperation" and asked every member to become a missionary of good will for Roxbury civic and business interests.

Election of officers was announced as follows: Hon. Frankland W. L. Miles, president; vice-presidents: Price Ferdinand, Harry H. Eaton, Joseph Lavin, Frederic J. Crosby, Samuel Hermanson, Constantine G. Voss, James H. Callahan and Samuel Shafran, Frederick A. Cronni, treasurer. Dr. Leon B Balicer, secretary.

Board of directors: Joseph G Baxter, Anslem L. Bacon, Kenneth Brett, Ralph Brett, Frank S. Watrman, Morris Burg, Edward J. Callahan, John F. Dowd, Morris Siterman, William J. Fisher, Dave Goodman, Theodore A. Glynn, Harry Haddock, John J. Madden, Ranna H. Welton, Elmer R. Martz, Herbert Montgomery and Maurice Peacard.

Ruth Clifford to Seek Divorce

Los Angeles, Jan. 10—Ruth Clifford, for many years a motion picture star, announced here she will seek a divorce soon from her husband, J. A. Cornelius. The couple separated by mutual consent a month ago, Miss Clifford said.

Miss Clifford, before coming to Hollywood, lived in New York and Pawtucket, R. I., where she was born.

BYRD FINDS HIS HIDDEN PLANES

Aboard Admiral Byrd's flagship enroute to Little America, Jan. 10 (AP) (Via MacKay radio)—Cheered by news that Little America is as Admiral Byrd left it after the first expedition, the crew of the second expedition's flagship watched with unceasing eager interest today the progress toward the faraway destination.

Lincoln Ellsworth, leader of another expedition, sent the message regarding Little America.

"Planes are in good condition, except for digging out," he said. "The radio masts also were okay, but tremendous ridges show in front of Vernap Mer bay, making it impassable for dog teams."

"That," said Admr. Byrd, "answers a question that I have wanted to know for years."

MORE BRITISH LIQUOR DUE

London, Jan. 10 (AP)—It was understood today that the United States would double its import quotas on British liquor immediately for the period ending March 31

An official announcement that the British quota on the United States pork products will be increased is not expected for the next several days, however.

The increased quota on American pork will be a permanent allotment when fixed.

2 TOWNS ADOPT POLICE RADIO

Following the lead shown by the Boston Evening American in its long campaign for radio-equipped police cars, two more New England towns will shortly be serviced by the police broadcasting station at Newton, it was learned today.

Wellesley and Needham have accepted the offer of Chief of Police Michael T. Hughes who announced he was willing to place his broadcasting station at the disposal of six nearby communities

At the same time two other towns, Brookline and Waltham, indicated they may take advantage of the offer of Chief Hughes if they found it impossible to finance their own broadcasting stations.

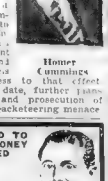
JUSTICE DEPARTMENT CHIEF BROADCASTS

Talk by Homer Cummings Tonight

By N. P. T.

Crusading against crime goes on What's more, it seemingly gains momentum with the passing of the where the strenuous proposition of preserving law and order occupied men. No atmosphere is more charged with electric energy along such lines than that surrounding the United States Department of Justice, directed by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut. Another of the two-fisted radio network speeches on the subject of checking crimes takes place over coast to coast channels (WEEI tonight at 10 arranged as the weekly "Radio Forum" feature.



Homer Cummings

ENEMY OF EVIL

Homer S. Cummings has become one of the outstanding Roosevelt Cabinet stalwarts, after having originally assumed the portfolio upon the passing in sudden death of Senator Thomas Walsh from Montana. Maintaining rigid Federal standards right and wrong, Mr. Cummings promises to outline "Law Enforcement and the Department of Justice" and therefore labels his air address to that effect Operations to date, further plans for exposure and prosecution of the wholesale racketeering menace

Weather Man Insists on Fair and Warmer

If you saw snow flurries today it was only "in fooling," because the weather man declared there was not a storm in sight and that it's even going to get warmer tonight.

The lowest temperature tonight will be at about or slightly above freezing, and tomorrow will be fair and warmer.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home
No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!
You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.
Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a pure, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.
Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, used for generations for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

COURT IS ASKED TO OUST WILD CARETAKER

Janitor Terrorizing Brighton Flats; Owners at Bay

All other means having failed owners of a Brighton apartment block, housing 400 persons, appealed to Superior Court today to oust a drunken janitor who, they claim, has taken control of the house, king of all he surveys.

The owners describe the situation as a menace and a nuisance, with the boilers apt to go up through the roof at any minute.

The bill in equity was filed today by the Park Holding Co., owners of the apartment block at 42 Strathmore rd. and 6-10-14 Orkney rd., Brighton

EXODUS THREATENED

The bill pictures Arthur Bourdelais, fireman and janitor, staggering about the premises, threatening to blow up the eight boilers, disrupting the phone service, invading the apartments of tenants and making ghizmeiff obnoxious, and throwing the rear of Bourdelais intoagents who who have been sent to disperse him

There are 96 apartments in the house and all are tenanted, but won't be long unless something is done about the janitor, claim the owners

The independence of apartment house janitors has grown through the years but none ever approached the audacity of this janitor hired last Aug. 15, if the claims of the petitioners are true

AGENTS KEPT OUT

For the court bill states that Bourdelais is noisily and abnoxiously drunk and going around insulting the tenants

Incapable of performing his duties.

Threatening owner's agents and calling them vilen ames when they seek to quiet him, so they don't now dare to enter the place.

Giving up all work but serving the ultimatum that he would remain and abuse as much damage as possible.

Disrupting the house phone service because all lines connect with his apartment.

Supplying no heat.

Yet threatening to blow up the boilers.

NEEDHAM AIMS LIQUOR RAIDS

State police raids against speakeasies in the Commonwealth will soon be launched, it was announced today by Gen. Daniel H. Needham, commissioner of public safety.

The police head said he had been holding back on the raids until most of the communities in the state had made decisions whether or not to issue liquor licenses

Now that this has been done, Needham, said, his detectives and troopers will open a state-wide drive to stamp out speakseasing and give protection to the licensed liquor dealers.

Needham denied at the same time that he intends to ask for an additional fores of 25 state detectives, doubling the present force.

MAN PLUMMETS 45 FT. TO DEATH

John Domenic, of 88 Zeigler at., Roxbury, plunged 45 feet to his death early today while police officers of the Dudley st., station looked on helplessly.

The police were summoned to the Zeigler st. address and saw Domenic swaying to and fro on the edge of the roof. When the officers warned him, Domenic leaped to an adjoining roof and then plunged to his death.

Sen. Warren Named Bridgewater Head

State Senator James E. Warren, of Lawrence, was today appointed superintendent of the Bridgewater State Farm by State Commissioner of Corrections Frederick J. Dillon He succeeds Robert Sherman, of New Bedford, who resigned several weeks ago when his administration was under fire.

Senator Warren will receive $3,500 a year, plus maintenance, if this is approved by the governor's council.

Ten-Year Struggle as Bank Moves to Take Brighton Home

By PEGGY DOYLE

Ten years of struggle and denial in an effort to maintain a home for her aged parents and three sons is scheduled to terminate with their loss of their small home when Mrs. Jane A. Marston accedes to the Brighton Co-Operative Bank's demand in eight days.

The buying of the house at 14 Hobart st., Brighton, was the major financial operation in this hard-working family's history Mrs. Marston's mother, Mrs George Davis, having accumulated $2000 suggested that it be used as a down payment on the modest two-apartment house since it was so ideally suited to their needs.

HOME OWN HANDIWORK

That was in 1923, just five years after Mrs. Marston had been left a widow with four small boys to support.

Through the years, with her mother becoming enfeebled as result of cataract growths on both eyes and her father's age finally incapacitating him for work, Mrs Marston continued to work not only as a librarian in a downtown department store but in countless other off-time occupations Throughout her ownership of the house, she has personally done all the painting, plastering, and varnishing of the two apartments.

"Otherwise it wouldn't have been done," she tells you, when she receives what she believes is undue praise for her versatility. "I've had to apportion my widow's mite very carefully and, since painting is costly, I decided to eliminate that expense by learning how to do the job myself."

LOSE JOB IN SLASH

Her son, Howard, 20, has contributed every penny he has earned since his first day's employment to the problem of meeting the monthly payments on the bank's contract, covering the purchase of the home.

The purchase price was $9700 The down payment of $2000, payments throughout the first year totalling $1000 and subsequent instalments reduced the mortgage held by the Brighton Co-Operative Bank to $5900. The monthly payments averaged $56

Three years ago, Mrs. Marston s father, who had been able to contribute something to the family income, lost his job. Last June, following upon a pay cut some time before that seriously affected the family finances, she was one of many deprived of jobs when wholesale staff slashings went into effect as a result of the depression

At the same time, her son was "let out." Each day he stalked the streets, his pockets filled with marked employment "ads," looking for work. Her tenant got behind in his rent and, her own situation making her doubly aware of the plight of others, against her better judgment she permitted him to occupy the apartment practically rent-free.

FORECLOSURE ORDERED

Finally, it came to this crux She was three months behind in her mortgage payments to the bank and her only income was the weekly $5 45-dollar pension she had recently managed to secure for her mother, the $5.60 she received for two days work at a department store and an occasional dollar or two earned by young Howard. The infrequent $5 paid by her in-arrears tenant was too irregular and rare to be listed among her as sets

And just that October morning—to make a desperate situation still more hopeless—there had come a communication on Brighton Co-Operative Bank stationery informing her that there was to be a foreclosure on her home.

Three or four days before that, Mrs Marston had lessened her indebtedness to the bank by one payment, miraculously scrimped together if tardy, but bank officials aren t interested in that. She was not the first foreclosure notice

It was then the plucky woman bethought herself of the Home Owners' Loan Corp. and its grand efforts in behalf of the worried small-home owner. Confidently and reassuringly, she confided her problem to the Home Owners' Loan Corp. in a letter. She extolled their plan of taking over mortgages from the bank and giving the bank the equivalent in government bonds and they agreed with her that it was a great boon to poor people in the position she was in.

THEN THE FINAL BLOW

Every detail of the supposed boon materialized. Right up to the final step, and then came the crushing blow. A letter signed by Charles F. Cotter, state manager for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, advising her that the mortgagee s consents had been sent to the Brighton Co-Operative Bank and that they would proceed with the loan as these signed consents had been returned.

Two days later, there came a second letter from the Home Owners', stating that "we regret to advise that the Brighton Co-Operative Bank has refused to accept our bonds in exchange for your property which they foreclosed recently. We are indeed sorry that we could not be of assistance to you."

Brighton Co-Operative bank. It seems, is one of those banks which decline to accept unguaranteed government bonds in exchange for mortgages in this particular instance, Robert A. Leavitt, the bank's treasurer, said that he did not believe the bonds were worth as much as the mortgage.

EIGHT DAYS OF GRACE

There is no one for Mrs. Marston to talk to, with. Neighbors, poor as herself, can do nothing. Her parents are in no condition to withstand financial blow. Far from discussing it with her son, her entire effort the past six months has been to cheer him.

Eight days remain for Mrs Marston in the home for which she has struggled for a period in hell. Always she has been able to predict hope for some possible development. Today hope has deserted her. When I saw her there were no tears. She said calmly that she is beyond weeping.

"Forgotten Men" Find Aid at New Service Center

One block from the Transient Service Center at 199 Cambridge st., West End, is Joy st., but there is no joy in the hearts of the men who seek work and shelter and food at the transient center.

They would be futile to tell all the stories heard from the jobless and homeless men, they are so painfully human. No work, homeless —all they have left is a desperate sort of courage that "things will get up."

For instance: Here is a man of a former chef. This is the first time he ever had to seek relief and he is bewildered. Sickness lost his job and he couldn't get it back. Now he seeks aid at the central application bureau. And so it goes, bricklayers, carpenters, masons—good, reliable men—all in the same plight.

As yet the bureau has not caught up with its work. No data on the number of applicants is available. The case history of the applicant is first taken, and then he is sent to some relief agency in Boston for food and shelter. It will probably take a week yet before the men can be investigated and then transferred to Camp Curtis Guild in Wakefield

STATE PROBE OF RELIEF GRAFT THREATENED

Finance Commission Hit for Strange Vet Attitude

By JAMES J. SMITH

Control of the investigation of alleged theft from veterans at the Soldiers' Relief Bureau may be summarily taken away from the Boston Finance Commission by the State Commission on Aids and Pensions, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The apathetic attitude of the "Fin Com" will be responsible if the state commission steps in, either of its own accord or through tax-payers' petition.

The cases of allegedly fraudulent dealings, through which veterans on the relief roles are said to have been "shortchanged" large amounts, were taken over by the Finance Commission after Mayor Mansfield himself had unearthed them. The "Fin Com" asked to handle the probe

GOODWIN'S FUNNY COMMENT

But within 24 hours of the mayor's acceptance of the commission's offer, Chairman Frank A. Goodwin, without any knowledge of the evidence, commented:

"Highly improbable."

This comment, which came to the attention of certain influential persons interested in a thorough, unprejudiced investigation of the serious charges, caused considerable unfavorable discussion

"It often happens that people on welfare or relief roles become disgruntled and prone to make all sorts of accusations," Goodwin declared, amplifying his first characterization of the charges.

FIN. COM. RUSHES IN

It was pointed out to him that in this instance the veterans had not brought the original charges, but that the evidence was unearthed by Mayor Mansfield himself in questioning employes of the relief bureau held over from the administration of former Commissioner John B. Hynes.

The mayor brought the evidence to light Saturday but it did not appear publicly until Sunday. Mayor Mansfield received the letter, offering the services of the Finance Commission, this morning. That same day Goodwin indicated his doubt the charges were true.

The Boston Evening American has learned, however, Mayor Mansfield is in possession of information regarding the cases of six other veterans besides the two whose cases that caused the inquiry.

Woman Hurt in Fall From Truck Cab

Thrown to the street when the door of a truck flew open, Mrs. Ethel Levin, 118 Webster st., Malden, was taken to Scalpwood hospital with injuries to her wrist. A man named Sobel also sustained injuries.

Harry Greenbaum told police he was on his way to 22 Lisbon street, Malden, when Mrs. Levin, a neighbor, carrying a lot of bundles. He offered her a ride, Sobel was also going that way, so he let him get in too. When the truck rounded the corner from Salem to Webster st., the door flew open and both Mrs. Levis and Sobel landed in the street

$60,000 Gift to Aid B. U. Law Students

A fund of $60,000 to aid students at the Boston University School of Law has been created under the will of Helen Osborne Gary widow of Asst. Dean Frank E Gary. The bequest, a permanent loan fund, the "Frank E H Gary Loan Fund," is the largest of its kind at the university, it was announced today.

The original bequest was for $50,000, with the provision that $10,000 would be added if the estate exceeds $300,000.

MURRAY TAKES OVER POST

Attorney Walter F. Murray of Brighton took the oath of office as associate street commissioner [illegible] at City Hall. The oath was administered by the assistant city clerk John B. Hynes

Commissioner Murray took over the duties of his office immediately at a desk that was laden with flowers.

MANY WORKERS BUILD CAMP HOUSES

Many carpenters—many painters and laborers rush to completion the many houses in the Transient Camp at Wakefield, Mass. At 199 Cambridge st, on Thursday or Friday will start the registration for care at these camps, another move in the national plan to care for the unemployed transients this winter and if necessary through next summer. Transients are classed as those not entitled to city dole or CWA attention because they have not been residents of town or city for over a year. Scores of workers were found by the cameraman. Each of the houses will be well heated. There will be comfort for all who are allowed the hospitality of the camp.

Glynn to Run for Congress Is City Hall's Big News

City Hall seethed with speculation of Irish extraction That group today, some of it [illegible] for Congress if he would run for mayor

Mayor Mansfield was interviewed with having announced that he would consolidate the city capital [illegible] and permit [illegible] deputments

"I have never at any time made such a statement," was the mayor's retort.

But the big news came in the form that "Teddy" Glynn, present chairman of the street commission would be a candidate for Congress opposing Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston

GLYNN STRONGHOLD

Glynn s resignation is said to be in the mayor's hands, awaiting his action

It was learned last night the move to send Glynn to Washington was launched by a delegation at a dinner in a North End restaurant. Official announcement of his candidacy is expected within two months

As a congressional candidate, Glynn is in a strategic position Congressman Douglass' district, the eleventh, includes Ward 1, East Boston; Ward 2, Charlestown; Ward 3, North and West Ende, and parts of Wards 8 and 9, South End and Roxbury

Glynn lives in Vine st, Roxbury in the district He is powerful there [illegible] Ward Ende are largely populated by persons [illegible]

MCDONALD FOR PRINTER

A [illegible] that James E. Moore would resign as [illegible] commissioner to run against Dem [illegible] was based on erroneous information [illegible] Douglass' prospective opponent, it was said

It was also pointed out that the confusion of Moore with Glynn as Con. Douglass opponent could certainly self-appointed [illegible] agents to be spokesmen for the mayor on the rumored candidacy [illegible]

Glynn s name had it that Daniel J. McDonald had been tendered [illegible] post of city printer in place [illegible] Casey The latter was [illegible] confirmed nor denied

JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON'S BRIDGE TIPS -:- FOURTH DEGREE -:- By K. S. Daiger

Bidding Often Too Strong for Hand

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When a player undertakes a Small Slam contract with a losing trick in trumps and only four honor-tricks in the combined hands it certainly requires the element of favorable distribution plus accurate play to insure the success of the contract. The rocks of distribution have wrecked many a hand in a Bridge game. The player who can find his way safely through these uncharted seas will find himself almost certainly how reached the point where he can claim some definite title as a Master Bridge player.

To all of us who play Bridge hands where great honors are seated will be brought to naught through distributional values prove extremely interesting. I suppose it is that feeling of continuity head-on-thing with those who appreciate are getting the worst of it that makes the hand of this type. In any event the play of the hand below, for which I am indebted to a friend in Texas, is extremely interesting. That is, I think, was possibly slightly so myself.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1♡	2◇	3♡	Pass
4♡	Double	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's raise of South's Opening bid of one heart to five hearts was too strong, and although South held no honors (except the three Aces and one Knave) he was at the very least a cheerful optimist when he bid six. However, "All's well that ends well," and this hand certainly ended in that way.

West's Opening lead was the diamond King, which was ruffed in the Dummy and the Ace of spades laid down. Upon this spade Ace the Declarer discarded the diamond 8. His next lead a small spade and ruffed with the deuce in his own hand. He then laid down the Ace of clubs and followed with the Ace of diamonds, upon which Dummy's last club was discarded. The Declarer now led the diamond 7, which was ruffed in Dummy with a small trump, and returned another spade, which he ruffed with the six. Now the deuce of clubs was led and ruffed with Dummy's 8 of hearts and another spade led from Dummy. There was ruffed in the closed hand with the heart Knave. West lacked a good lead at this point, and instead of over-ruffing, he discarded a diamond, whereupon the Declarer cashed another low club and ruffed with Dummy's nine. Next the 8 of spades was led from Dummy and Declarer ruffed with the Ace. There remained but two tricks, and of these the Declarer was sure to win one. To the twelfth trick he led a small club, and West was trapped. If he played the Ten of hearts the Dummy would over-ruff with the Queen, whereas, if he played the heart King, Dummy would discard the last spade and retain the heart Queen for the last trick. The contract could be fulfilled against any defense.

Today's Question

North-South vulnerable. The bidding:

North	South

You, South, hold:
♠KQ42 ♡87 ◇K1053 ♣QJ2

What do you bid?

Answer—Five clubs. South must naturally take some definite action over North's two-spade bid. The South hand is considerably better than a minimum two-spade response as it is a matter of fact, is very close to a three-spade response. South therefore cannot refuse North's Slam invitation and simply bid off with four spades. Five clubs is a slightly better bid than jumping from four clubs to five spades.

'Sunny' Paige Is Buried; Husband Only One of Those Present to Give Way to Grief

Randolph Paige gave a moan as he turned away from the grave of his wife, but Robert Cleveland's face bore the hard mask of a man who is unconscious and who is nevertheless able to move.

The funeral depressed me not a little in spite of myself. I stopped at the office on my way back from the cemetery and wrote a couple of columns—a story not of words but from my very heart.

Then I drove back to Towson and so back again to the Paige estate. Anderson was sitting in the library.

"Everything went off all right?"

I nodded. "It was a nasty ordeal, Andy. I've grown pretty hard-boiled in fifteen years of newspaper life, but I swear I couldn't see that pretty little thing buried without feeling it. What an ending! What terror she must have suffered before Death released her!"

"I'm not all hard myself," answered the Inspector. "Sometimes I wish I were. I could see with more mercy and less justice."

And then Robert Cleveland and Mrs. Phelps were announced.

The lawyer's face was drawn with grief and anxiety and worry and Mrs. Phelps was still crying and making no effort to conceal it.

Cleveland looked at me with ill-hidden dismay.

"Surely I can talk with you privately, Inspector," he began.

"I see no reason why you should," retorted Anderson coldly. "You were given that privilege this morning and you may remember that you availed yourself of it by lying to me. And I want my first assistant, Mr. Carroll, to hear your story whatever it may be."

"Carroll!" he shouted, and Dickey promptly appeared from the rear of the house.

"But what I have to say is of an extremely personal nature," protested Cleveland. "Surely you owe me that courtesy!"

"I owe you nothing," answered Anderson imperturbably. "I can readily understand your feeling in the matter and if you had come to me in this spirit in the first place I should have been more than willing to have granted you a private interview. But since you saw fit to deceive me and to throw me off the track as far as you were able, I cannot see now why I should extend any privileges to you, and I feel that it is my duty to warn you that any statement which you may make is at your own risk. There is, as you must certainly know, much to connect you and Mrs. Phelps with this murder and I cannot make you any promises."

Mr. Cleveland digested these remarks for a moment and hesitated as if wondering if it would not be the best thing after all, to bolt and let the police discover whatever they were able.

TRUTH REVEALED

Mrs. Phelps decided for him.

"We'll have to tell the truth," she said. "Suppose we all sit down, and I think that after Mr. Cleveland has finished his story, you will understand that neither he nor I had anything to do with Sunny's tragic death."

So we drew our chairs up around the fire and Robert Cleveland began his recital of what has seemed to me one of the most human stories I have ever run across in my entire newspaper career.

"Gentlemen," he began, "I have no intention of boring you with my private affairs, but if you are to understand the reason which brought Mrs. Phelps and myself here on the night of Mrs. Paige's death, a shall have to go back a couple of years. As you know, I am a member of the attorney general's office and I have a large private practice as well. Back of me is a career at the bar which has been honorable and square.

"Here he drew out his case of cigarettes and lighted one with hands that were shaking.

"I am a bachelor, largely because women have never had any especial appeal to me. I have lots of women friends and I like them and enjoy their society. But I have never fallen in love. At least, I never did, until Sunny Paige brought his new wife home from England with him.

"We are close neighbors, you know, and I have been counsel for the Paige family for years. My father was their legal adviser before me.

"Therefore, I was prepared to welcome Mrs. Paige, and to like her, but I did not expect to fall head over heels in love with her the second I saw her, like any seventeen-year-old schoolboy. To me she was not only a beautiful and charming child, full of whims and delightful fancies—but I knew what every man knows at some time in his life—that she was the one and only woman I could ever truly love.

"I began to come here to the house more and more often, and I must ask you to believe me when I tell you that I scarcely realized that it was love for another man's wife which was tearing me.

"Mrs. Paige is not here to defend her honor, so I want you to understand that I am not trying to picture for you any illicit romance or liaison between a young wife and a man old enough to be her father. She liked me—I have that much to remember, anyhow—but much as she might have liked an older brother. Admiration of men was nothing new to her and she knew well how to guide me into the safe channels of friendship.

"She would have succeeded, for my love was real enough to desire only her happiness, had it not been for the fact that it soon became apparent that Sunny Paige was stepping out among the ladies and that he was constantly unfaithful to this sweet girl. That's common knowledge and common gossip.

TOLD TO STAY AWAY

"That fact, as well as my constantly growing affection, seemed to set me crazy.

"I suppose, gentlemen, that there is no fool like an old fool, no emotion as uncontrolled and violent as that which consumes a middle-aged man who has never even experienced the growing pains of puppy love.

"I began to write Sunny love letters—oh, just little notes that I thought some day might come to mean something to her. I suppose that she has received thousands of such offerings in her life and took them as a matter of course.

"But the child seemed to understand something of what I was suffering, for every once in a while I used to get an answer from her saying that she knew how I felt and that she was sorry. Then she wrote me finally that I had better not come here to the house any more—that she loved Paige only and that someone might misunderstand my calls.

"I didn't quite understand this, until one day I learned that Sunny was going to be a mother. For a little while, I was really crazy, I think. I was certain that her life with Ranny was only a question of time and I feared for her and for her baby.

"I wrote to her and begged her to see me but she replied that she was very happy and that there was nothing to worry about.

"But I was determined to talk to her and to find out the true state of affairs for myself. I knew that Mrs. Phelps here was a good friend of Sunny's, and Sunny had often told me that her heart was as big as her head. I had a casual acquaintance with her as I told you and I determined to appeal to her and to see if Sunny would not permit me one last interview if she were present."

Here Cleveland turned to Mrs Phelps who nodded a quiet assent.

"The result was that I discovered that Mrs. Phelps felt as bitterly about Ranny's meanderings as I did. She had often begged Sunny to obtain a divorce. She promised to help me and she succeeded in getting Sunny to talk to me that last night—the night she was killed. I had no very definite idea in my mind—I just wanted to see her and to tell her face to face that if she ever needed a home for herself and her child that she was to come directly to me.

Here Cleveland stared sadly into the flames for a moment.

"Well, I called for Mrs. Phelps in my car that night at 8 o'clock as you already know. We drove straight here and Sunny herself let us in. I didn't see any servants or anyone else.

"She appeared very agitated and unhappy, due to my persistence, I thought, and I inwardly cursed myself for my folly in disturbing her while she was in that condition. Mrs. Phelps never left us alone for a single moment.

"Sunny began to cry almost as soon as we came in. She seemed dreadfully upset.

"'You must just let me alone, dear,' she told me again and again. 'I do not love you in the way that you want and you are going to spoil my life.'

LOVE FOR ONE MAN

"'I love Ranny and him only and even if he is unfaithful to me, I love him anyhow. Some day he will understand that I truly I do love him and he will be content with me alone.

"'And you not only jeopardize my happiness but you are running the risk of spoiling your entire professional career. To you and to me, too, your love seems a very beautiful thing, but that is not the way the world looks at it. Someone will get one of your letters'—and she waved her hand toward that desk over there. 'I keep them locked in that inside drawer because I am not very happy and they mean more to me than you might think. Sometimes I like to get them out and read them and know that I have such a true friend.'"

The lawyer's voice broke and he was unable to continue.

"That was all that happened," explained Mrs. Phelps. "Mr. Cleveland promised that he would do as she asked and told her that if she ever needed help that she was to come directly to him. Then we said good-bye to her and left her. Mr. Cleveland drove me straight home."

Canadian Hockey Clubs Unite to Gang the Bruins ↑ ↓ Visions of a Cash Helping and Added Punishment to Shore

By AUSTEN LAKE

My countrymen, forgive me if I twitter. But those hypersensitive bodies, the Canadian clubs of the National Hockey League, are handing together to squeeze reparations, or indemnities, from the Boston Bruins for the injury to Ace Bailey, much as the Canadian government did during the period of prohibition when a carrier of contraband rum would be shagged out of American waters by a Coast Guard cruiser and scuttled with a shot below the waterline. Then the Canadians would go into a screaming tantrum about American imperialism, violations of international amity and piracy under cover of a prohibition that was a silly law anyway.

And, being a goofy old codger, rigged in outlandish striped pants, a star spangled dinner jacket and a whisp of spinach on his chin, Uncle Sam would scoop into his pockets and pay the low, sinister and unscrupulous owners of the sunken vessel a rich stake covering four times the value of the craft and its cargo and the matter would be ended until it happened again. It was the sort of American sportsmanship that convinced neighboring nations that Uncle Sam is just a fruity, daffy old gent with candy in his pockets and who, if they shrieked loud enough, would cut a nice slice of treasury cake for the sake of buying peace and quiet.

Fortunately for the character of American sport and sporting folk, the men who make up the National League hockey teams on this side of the border are Canadian born and bred, and as such, cannot logically be assailed by Canadian journalists, who are highly partusan, as specimens of American muckerism. So that the up-yonder writers, whose natural love of fair play withers into free lance fanaticism and home town apology whenever the U. S. is involved, have had to be pleased that the "muckerisms" happened on American soil, incited no doubt by Yankee blood lust.

Smythe Calls the Faithful to Arms

The Montreal Maroons and the Ottawa Senators, which are not related to the Toronto Maple Leafs except in a common national fellowship, demand that the league governors review Eddie Shore's suspension with an eye to greater severity, and the cost of Ace Bailey's hospitalization, with an eye to indemnity, or fruit cake. The Maroons and the Senators would not share the fruit cake, but a little longer suspension of Shore would make the Bruins easier pickings, and add a little heavier tinsel plating to their league standing, or is that just the vaporing of naturally nasty and suspicious mind?

There has been no much screaming, yanking out of head fuzz and chucking swear words from Canada ever since the Bailey accident, and I call it an accident because Mr. Frank Patrick, the league's body master or provost, called it an accident officially while suspending Shore for two months, that it has assumed proportions of a holy war with loyal followers, like colonial patriots, grabbing their weapons and flocking to their loving leaders. And over all the clatter rises the wailing cry of Connie Smythe, the Maple Leaf ascetic, inciting the faithful to riot.

One can excuse the fierce actions and shrill protests of the players which burst out impulsively under the competitive strain and heat of the battle, which demands a certain amount of emotional letgo. But it is hard to understand how the Canadian leaders and writers can work up such a sustained lather over an incident that was basically less malicious than the many cases of atrocious assault that have happened in late hockey history. As, for example, the time last March when Art Coulter and Tommy Gorman bagged referee Bill Stewart of Boston in his own sweater and then flogged him for dear life. The whole saga of the sport has been a record of chivvying and bruising, with side splashes of strong language, so that a hockey manager must have a strong dash of the lawyer in his makeup, which challenges everything and concedes nothing.

I am tempted sometimes to remind the public that the Maple Leafs, the Maroons, the Senators and the Bruins are really nothing but a set of mercenary athletes gathered from Saskatoon, Winnipeg or Manitoba and have no sentimental attachments to their alma mater cities other than a source of cash income. And that the hockey clubs which whip up the fans to such a frenzy of affection are really nothing more than commercial firms devoted to the ends of profit just as any biscuit factory or linen laundry.

This would be an unpopular heresy, not gratefully received by folk who are fond of their sporting illusions. And it detracts no whit from the charm of the Maple Leafs and Bruins that they are not natives of the cities where they shed their blood. The players, by themselves, are a pretty forgiving lot, who sustain no long grudges, so that Bailey soon will receive Shore, the man who accidentally caused his dolor, in perfect friendship. Which would make for more perfect international amity were it not for the Canadian vision of Americans as fruity, daffy Old Uncle Sams with candy in their pockets who, if they yell loud enough, will cut a slice of treasury cake for the sake of buying quiet.

FANS ASKED TO RATE BOXERS

By JACK CONWAY

New England's 12 leading boxers! Who are they?

The Boston Evening American is interested in finding out just how YOU rate the ring men.

Boston and New England wrestling fans have just rated the 10 leading wrestlers. They placed Ed Don George at the head of their list, with Jim Browning second, Henri DeGlane third, Jim Londos fourth, and "Jumping" Joe Savoldi fifth

Now, how about the boxers?

Let us restrict ourselves to New England boxers.

One of the chief ideas of this rating is to find out what the fans think of our New England ring men. Any boxer who makes his residence in New England is entitled to consideration.

Matchmaker Billy Ames of the Boston Garden has given the Boston Evening American 50 pairs of tickets to his boxing show at the Garden a week from Friday night which will be awarded to the winners. Ames has Andy Callahan defending his New England welterweight crown against Werther Atcell, while Unknown Winston of Hartford will risk his heavyweight crown against Dick Madden of Roxbury Every New England boxer has supporters who believe he can lick the opposition.

In the rating of the boxers, you may include boxers regardless of what class they compete in. Perhaps you believe a bantamweight or featherweight is the king of New England boxers

If you wish, you may give your views on the boxing game. If space permits, some of these expressions of opinion will be published

Remember, you should name 12 boxers. Rate them according to your personal belief as to their merits. Do it NOW!

Mail your ratings to Jack Conway, Sporting Department, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston

'Y' MAY LOSE SCHOOL MEET

A shift of the scene of the Northeastern interscholastic track games from the Boston Y. M. C. A. gym is being contemplated for this year's meeting which is billed for January 27.

More than 25 schools already have planned to compete in the games. With a few more entries to come, a record list of schools will enter this track feature.

Inadequate racing and spectator accommodations at the Y are responsible for the possible change to the East Armory. The Garden track will be completed that afternoon, because of the K. of C games of that night. But it is understood that two schools already have arranged for the use of the track for that afternoon for a dual meeting

Either the Garden or East Armory would be a big improvement over the Y gym. Where the few spectators who can be accommodated can see only a small part of the meeting, and where the narrow track prompts many jams among runners.

Since the N. U. games have grown to major proportions the need of better accommodations has increasingly become apparent. This year's record breaking entry list may provide the impetus to push the games into more spacious surroundings.

Tech Matmen Set for Rochester U.

The Tech wrestling team which defeated Brown last week is primed to "take" the University of Rochester matmen who will meet the Engineers Friday night at the Tech hangar gym.

Tom Graham, who comes from Butte, Mont., is the Tech heavy entry, and has shown great improvement on the mat and is bound to give the New York Staters' entry a busy time.

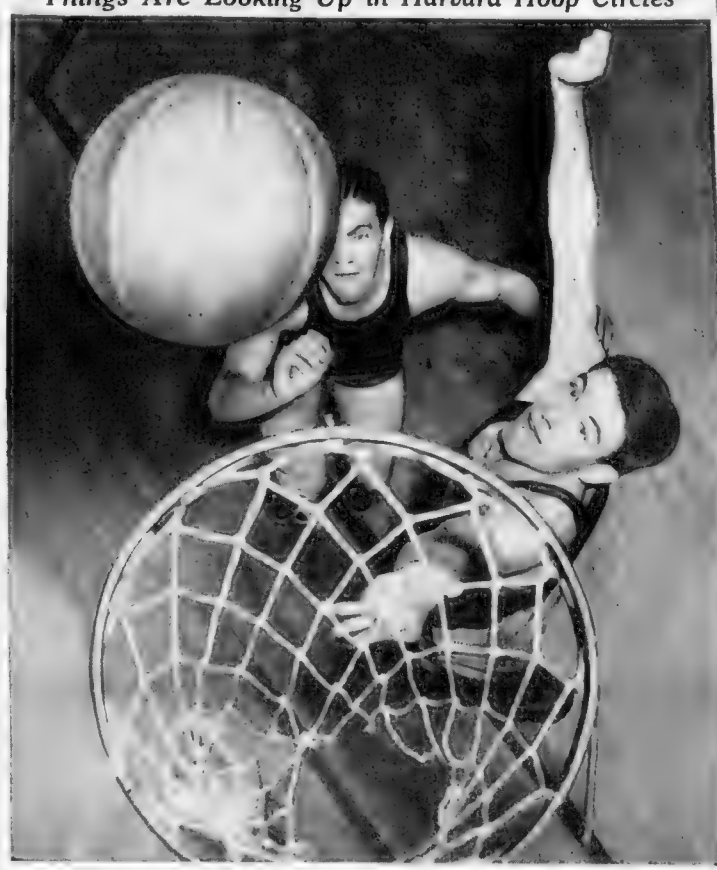
Things Are Looking Up in Harvard Hoop Circles



DONALD BATES

Harvard meets Yale in an Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League game tonight. Wesley Fesler's new Crimson five has played two league games to date. And has lost both. Was swamped by Dartmouth. Showed great improvement against

EUGENE MERRY

Penn. Probably won't be good enough to scare Blue tonight but should make a battle of it. Yale is sending up a veteran quintet. Only soph on outfit is Eddie Wilson. Eddie stands only six feet seven inches.

HALLAHAN CUP B. A. A. AWARD

Genuine approval was registered on all sides today on the decision of the B. A. A. athletic committee to perpetuate the memory of one of the country's leading track experts in the late Johnny Hallahan. Boston sports writer and announcer

The new John J. Hallahan trophy will be underwritten by voluntary contributions from his legion of friends and former associates

Fittingly, it will be awarded to "that athlete, who by his performance, competitive spirit, or sportsmanship shall be deemed the outstanding competitor in the B. A. A. games."

Under the terms of the trophy, it might be awarded not only to some record breaker but also to some athlete whose contributions are less spectacular, or to a man running an exceptionally fast leg on a winning or losing relay team, or to the athlete whose self sacrifice or sportsmanship was a high light of the evening performances.

The trophy will be a large silver bowl with the names of the winner inscribed each year.

Harvard, Yale in Hoop Battle at Cambridge

Harvard's varsity basketball team plays its fourth league game of the season this evening with the 1932 champion, Yale, as its opponent. The game will be played at the Harvard Indoor Athletic Building at 8:30 o'clock, following a preliminary game between the Harvard freshmen and the M. I. T. freshmen.

The Crimson will be Yale's first league opponent of the season. The Elis' earlier activity has been confined to games with Providence College and Fordham, both of which were lost, so it would not be too great a surprise if Wes Fesler's charges upset the champs.

Fesler has done remarkable work with his scanty material. The Crimson showed tremendous improvement in its game with the U. of Penn, at Philadelphia last week, leading the veteran Quakers through the first half before finally succumbing by a close score.

The changes in the Crimson lineup made by Fesler for the Penn game will continue in effect again tonight, with Bryce and Comfort a pair of sophomores, at the forward positions

Yale will present a veteran lineup with the single exception of the center position, where Coach Elmer Ripley has installed Edward Wilson.

'May Risk Title Abroad

Los Angeles, Jan. 10—Jimmy McLarnin, world's welterweight champion and only remaining one-punch man in pugilism, may go abroad to make his first defense of the title, it was revealed here today. The champion, it was said, still was interested only in big money and, therefore, was inclined to accept a guarantee made by a London promotey to meet Jack Hood, the Englishman, while waiting for big gates to come back to American boxing.

Charley "Fop" Foster, his manager, admitted today that McLarnin was in receipt of an offer from Madison Square Garden to fight Vince Dundee for the middleweight championship but declined to comment on it

The welterweight champion has always fought for big money and has kept most of it. He, therefore, isn't interested in what is called "depression" gates, according to Foster, who has refused $55,000 to meet Young Corbett in a return match and $25,000 to meet Andy Callahan in Boston.

Governor and Mayor Greet Barabas

New York, Jan. 10 (INS)—Al Barabas, Columbia University halfback, who scored the winning touchdown against Stanford in the Rose Bowl New Year's day, today had the honor of having had the mayor of his home town and the governor of his State turn out to honor him

Both Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City and Gov. A Harry Moore of New Jersey greeted the young sophomore before thousands of enthusiastic admirers in Jersey City last night

Yanks Release Brennan, Hill

New York, Jan. 10 (US)—Don Brennan, pitcher, and Jesse Hill, outfielder, have been released to the Newark International League club on option, it was announced today by the New York Yankees office. Brennan, after starting last season with the Yanks, was sent back to the Bears in midseason, while Hill played the entire season with the St. Paul club of the American Association

Tropical Park Mutuels

For Tuesday, Jan. 9

First total (1 5-7)	$231.00
Second total (1-2-3-5-7)	370.50
Third total (7 races)	447.10

SOX WILL KEEP MEL ALMADA

Seattle, Jan. 10 (AP)—George Vanderveer, vice-president and principal stockholder in the Seattle baseball club of the Pacific Coast league, said today that reports Americans had exercised an option on Mel Almada, outfielder, acquired last year

The Seattle club was paid $10,000, Vanderveer said, but the amount will help the team when here to "get a good start" by referring to recent financial difficulties of the Seattle club.

Third B. C. Banquet to Gridmen Tonight

The third in a series of victory football banquets is to be tendered to the Boston College football squad at Hotel Kenmore tonight.

Leading a distinguished group of prominent speakers at the Boston College function in the Fenway will be mayor of Boston Frederick W. Mansfield who will be making his debut as a Hub mayor. Mansfield is the first mayor of Boston

Graduate Manager John P. Curley, '34, will announce the Eagles' College football schedule for the 1934 season

7 Canadian Stars in Wisconsin Meet

Conomowoc, Wis., Jan. 10 (AP)—Seven Canadian speed skating stars, all of whom wore the Maple Leaf in the 1932 Olympic games, have entered the North American championship meet on Lake Beulah, January 27-28.

The Canadian delegation includes Frank Stack, Alex Hurd and Herb Black, along with Mrs. Leila Brooks-Foster, Gladys Ferguson, Hattie Donaldson Briggs and Florence Hurd.

BRUINS CHIEF WANTS SHORE CASE HEARD IN BOSTON

Combining a blistering attack on Connie Smythe, president of Toronto's Maple Leafs, characterizing him as a "ballyhoo artist who considers showmanship, league politics and monetary return above sportsmanship a good taste" Charles F. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins, today wired Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, requesting that the special meeting of the board of governors to hear the appeal of the Toronto club be held in Boston.

Adams followed up his wire to Calder with a letter of the same import.

EDDIE SHORE SAILS

The Bruins' owner stressed the fact that Boston is the best available place for the hearing inasmuch as witnesses could testify under oath without incurring substantial expenditure to the league and that further information of decided importance could be divulged by interested Boston parties.

While the controversy was raging, Eddie Shore, suspended Boston Bruins hockey star, today sailed from Bermuda on the Monarch of Bermuda. He will reach New York on Friday.

Shore has been recuperating from mental and physical strain for the past two weeks

THE STATEMENT

Mr Frank Calder, President National Hockey League Montreal, Canada

I telegraphed you today as follows:

"Press reports state Toronto, Maroons, Ottawa have requested special meeting governors to hear appeal of the Toronto Club in Shore-Bailey case. Request such meeting, if called, be called in Boston. Believe this best available place to reopen or rehear controversy."

"In case such a meeting is called, there are other matters relative to the same affair that should be presented to the governors concurrently with the matter of Toronto's appeal.

By holding the meeting in Boston, it will save time and expense, as it would be only proper that the meeting be held where witnesses under oath may appear and present their testimony without incurring a substantial expenditure to the league.

I am pleased rather than disturbed that Mr. Smythe has appealed from the decision of the managing director as it will afford the opportunity to present to the governors much information that I believe the managing director and counsel considered irrelevant in the Shore-Bailey case but of decided importance to the league.

The motive behind Smythe's appeal may be persecution of a player or a club, "ballyhoo" which Smythe considers showmanship, an attack on the office of managing director, league politics, or a monetary return which Smythe, I believe, would at any time place above sportsmanship and good taste.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) C. F. ADAMS,
Boston Bruins.

Princeton Regains Basketball Lead

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—Princeton's Tigers regained undisputed possession of the eastern intercollegiate basketball league lead

The Tigers scored their second decisive victory in as many starts last night when they trounced the Columbia Lions, 42-21, at Princeton. They had opened their campaign with a 49-19 conquest of Harvard.

BIG BILL TILDEN AT 42 STILL NET'S GENIUS OF ALL TIME

Thrills in Sport

Lacoste Gave Bill Tilden the GreatestThrill He Ever Had—

But He May Get a Greater One When He Plays Vines Tonight

By Jack Kofoed

There was a vast crowd in the Roland Garros Stadium Bill Tilden was playing a Davis Cup match with Lacoste That was enough to bring the enthusiasts pouring through the turnstiles . . . grabbing excitedly Tilden and Lacoste . . . masters of the game—and France . . . ah. France was making her great bid for the international trophy. Everything hinged on the battle between these intent young men in white

Big Bill had been in trouble . . . with the United States Lawn Tennis Association, as usual. He was taken off the team . . . but put back again. The association couldn't function without that gaunt veteran, with his narrow face and determined eyes.

Tilden didn't play well. As a matter of fact, he never played worse He had no forehand or backhand, for that matter, but he had the shrewdest brain in tennis and a competitive temperament second to none. He pitted these assets against one of the world's best . . . and when four sets were over each man had won two

. . . The American was tired. He had drawn heavily upon his reserve and there was little left. But no one ever safely counted Bill Tilden out of the running. Every nerve and sinew . every bit of determinat on in him was focussed on the task of beating the Frenchman

Then came the big moment. Bill and Lacoste were set with Lacoste serving and the count 15 all The Frenchman drove Bill to a corner . . . then charged to the net which he seldom did.

Eyes fixed on the flying ball . . . ears attuned to the click, click of gut against rubber, Big Bill's mind was working fast.

When he sent the ball back, Tilden raced instantly to the other side of the court . . . helter-skelter . . . as fast as he could go Sure enough, Lacoste played a cross court shot at a sharp angle . . . an almost impossible one to return. Bill stretched his long arm as far as he could reach . . . and swung the racket. He felt the ball shoot off the face of it, and then rolled heels-over-head in the shadow of the umpire's chair

He didn't know what had happened . . . whether the ball was in or out . . . but he felt pretty sure in his heart that if it was out the Frenchman had an advantage over him he'd overcome. Bill rose, a little shaken, while the Stade Roland Garros thundered with unbelieving cheers. The ball had landed inside . . . and one of the most amazing shots in tennis competition had been made.

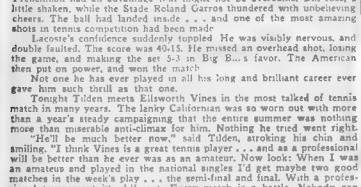
Lacoste's confidence suddenly toppled He was visibly nervous, and double faulted. The score was 40-15. He missed an overhead shot, losing the game, and making the set 5-3 in Big Bill's favor. The American then got his power, and won the match

Not one he has ever played in all his long and brilliant career ever gave him such thrill as that one.

Tonight Tilden meets Ellsworth Vines in the most talked of tennis match in many years. The lanky Californian was so worn out with more than a year's steady campaigning that the entire summer was nothing more than miserable anti-climax for him. Nothing he tried went right.

"He'll be much better now," said Tilden, stroking his chin and smiling. "I think Vines is a great tennis player . . . and as a professional will be better than he ever was as an amateur. Now look: When I was an amateur and played in the national angles I'd get maybe two good matches in the week's play . . . the semi-final and final. With a professional tournament it's different. Every match is a battle. Nobody can stall around with Richards and Kozeluh or Cochet. A fellow has to give everything he's got every day. That's bound to make him better

"About tonight? Well, certainly, I expect to win . . . but not easily. I tell you Ellsworth has something. Give him a year of competition with the professionals and he'll be one of the greatest."



RENE LACOSTE BILL TILDEN

I wouldn't miss that match tonight for plenty. Big Bill is forty-one years old, and by all athletic signs should be passe. But it is only a week ago he won the indoor professional championship from a strong field, defeating Vines. Richards in the final. He seems to have an inexhaustible store of strength and vitality. His keen interest in winning has never dimmed.

Vines is just a boy compared with him In this professional debut of his, Ellsworth will be keyed to the highest pitch he can achieve At one swoop he can prove that last summer's misery was due only to the fact he was over-tennised . . . that he can hold his own with anybody. If he beats Big Bill he'll be made. Tennis is his business now . . . not his avocation. He is determined to make good from the start

I'll be pulling for the old man myself. I remember the first time I saw Tilden play, years ago in Germantown, when he faced Manuel Alonso, a fine player, and won 6-2, 6-0. The good looking Spaniard . . . an internationalist . . . stood flat footed and watched the ball shoot by him like chain lightning. He simply couldn't get his racket on the ball.

Big Bill ranks with Bobby Jones, Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey as one of the superlatively outstanding athletic figures of the age. Grey hairs are beginning to creep into his coal black thatch . . . and they tell us that his legs aren't what they used to be . . . but I wouldn't bet a sou against him, no matter whether his opponent was Vines, Cochet or Richards

Ring Cares Forgotten

Lou Brouillard of Worcester, former welter and middleweight champion of the world, has taken on a new manager. Larrupin' Lou took the big jump in New York, recently marrying the former Minnie Beston of Hough's Neck. The marriage of Lou and Minnie is a true ring romance. Minnie's dad was proprietor of the gym in which Brouillard trained and Minnie was a keen observer. Hence the happy marriage.

YALE ADVISORY BOARD FAVORS HARRY KIPKE

New Haven, Conn., Jan 10 (INS)—Tradition appeared tottering on the brink of a great fall today as Yale's football chances in coming seasons brightened when it became apparent six of eight members on Athletic Director Mal colm Farmer's advisory football committee favor Harry Kipke of Michigan as Yale head coach.

But Farmer remained steadfast in his belief that no one but a Yale man should coach a Yale team and suggested Ted Jones former Eli star and football mentor for many years, according to reports reaching here today from New York where Farmer and his associates are battling the question.

Athletic minded alumni desire drastic changes at Yale They demand a winning team and tradition or no tradition, is at nothing but a thorough going shake-up will bring back Yales lost gridiron prestige.

One thing appeared quite certain today and that was Reggie Root will not be given another chance as head coach.

Closed lips met all questioners at the Yale Club and Acorn Commodore in New York where the committee is meeting, but the impression gained weight today that Farmer will not oppose the wishes of his associate And his word usually goes with administrative authority, so the final say on selection of a coach

If Cupe Black, Walter Leverine Steve Spalding, Ralph Bloomer and Eddie Beach can convince Farmer Kipke is the man for the job Kipke will be chosen

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 10 (AP)—Franklin C. Cappon, assistant director of athletics at University of Michigan, today spiked reports that he might join the Yale University athletic staff

"I am not interested in any proposition that involves a change of scenery," he said. "I shall stay at Michigan as long as my services are deemed desirable by Mr. Yost and other Michigan athletic authorities."

Cappon's name has been mentioned with Head Coach Harry Kipke and members of the Michigan football coaching staff

Braves Greet New Ball as Offensive Help

By JOE CASHMAN

The tone of the majority of communications reaching this corner recently indicates that many fans doubt the claim of President John Heydler of the National League that managers in his circuit urged the adoption of the livelier American League ball as the standard sphere of the future.

They can't see how adding a decade to the ball can possibly help a club like the Braves who depend almost entirely on outpitching and fielding strength to win ball games And they can't imagine a pint as smart as Bill McKechnie being in favor of any such scheme.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the Tribe was in favor of the change, however the other clubs felt about it.

FUCHS ANSWERS

"I can understand why many doubt the wisdom of the Braves in agreeing to pep up the ball," said Judge Fuchs when we brought up the subject. "Our strongest assets have been our pitching and fielding and a livelier ball will tend to weaken us in these departments. But we feel the gain we'll make offensively will more than offset any loss we may suffer defensively.

"We had a lively ball in our league in 1930. So what? So Frank Hogan, who hit .333 last year, hit .339. So Pinky Whitney, who batted .350 last year, hit .381.

"Our pitchers' earned-run averages may increase with the new ball but they shouldn't need any more stuff or be forced to bear down any harder to win than they did last year, if two of the supporting cast can add 178 points to the attack and the rest help the good cause along

"Maybe it will be proven that I have the wrong slant, but I insist the experiment is worth trying after our experience last summer. We broke all fielding marks and our pitching was as good as the best, yet we had our troubles finishing in the first division."

The Judge could have strengthened his argument by bringing in the public's side slant, which no doubt had much to do with the decision of the senior circuit to adopt the junior loop's agate

FANS LIKE PUNCH

The average fan likes the big punch in all his sports and the guys who provide it are his heroes. He admires defensive ability, precision and team work, but he pays good money only if he is furnished the wallop

The last world's series was a good example. Two of the best-balanced and most evenly matched rivals in the history of the classic collided and the gate was the smallest in a decade. Two mediocre clubs with a Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Klein or Simmons would have packed the parks.

The National League, in this envoy's opinion, made a popular and profitable move in encouraging slugging by adopting the livelier ball.

VENZKE TO BID FOR CURLEY CUP

Gene Venzke, University of Penn sophomore and world indoor mile record holder, stands an excellent opportunity to retire the Hon. James M. Curley Cup, trophy presented by the former mayor of Boston for competition in the special invitation K. of C. mile run, at the annual William C. Fraser games at Boston Garden, on Jan 27

While Venzke has yet to send in his entry blank, it appears fairly certain that the Penn flier will be back to repeat his 1932 and 1933 victories and thus retire the trophy one of the most prized in track competition.

In the event that Venzke does compete and manages to lead the fast field which will oppose him, the trophy will become his permanent possession

In 1932 he ran under the colors of the Swedish-American Club. In 1933 for the New York A. C. This year he will represent Penn

The rules will be waived in the event Venzke wins. They state that the trophy goes to the club or college whose representative wins it three times.

The same held true when Lloyd Hahn retired the previous trophy in 1928. Hahn was given permanent possession of the cup instead of the N. A. A. which he was representing at the time.

Leo Lermond, B. A. A. won a leg on the Curley trophy in 1929, followed by Ray Conger, Illinois A. C. in 1930 and 1931 and Venzke in 1932 and 1933

FACES VINES IN STERN TEST TONIGHT

By JOHN R. TUNIS

New York, Jan. 10—Like football, like ice hockey, like boxing, lawn tennis is a young man's sport. Yet Bill Tilden who is generally acknowledged the chief exponent of the game at present, is athletically speaking, anything but young. He's an ancient. The plain fact is there are few players 10 years his junior anywhere in the world good enough to make a first class Davies Cup team this year. Now why is Tilden so extraordinary?

GOOD, NOT GREAT

Let's analize his game. You've seen his game, what do you think of his service? Good, yes. Great even, but not incomparable. Better, I'd say, than Frank Shields; but not quite as powerful as Johnny Doeg's. His forehand is first class, isn't it? Certainly, but there have been any number of top grade forehands in the game; Tony Wilding's, Billy Johnston's, that drive for instance. Personally I'd rather have Fred Perry's. The Englishman takes the ball earlier than Tilden does, he is just as steady and can hit hard when necessary.

Tilden's backhand? One of his best shots. Granted, few better. But I doubt if he himself would consider it superior to Rene Lacoste's when the crocodile was at his peak

'NET BRAINS' HIS ACE

Tilden is an all-court player. He has every shot at his command, you say. Yes, but it isn't merely strokes which have put him so far ahead of the field. What is it, then? Agility? Of course, he is quick, fast, amazingly so, but his reflexes were never as rapid as those of Henri Cochet.

No, in my opinion the one thing which makes Bill Tilden the peer of the list, the asset lacking in so many first class stars today, is intelligence. He has intelligence and never holds it in.

Tilden possesses a brain. This is not general even among the great athletic stars of history. He has a brain and uses it. All the time, in every rally, through the hardest fought points, he is thinking.

Howard Closes Gym; Boxing Dying, He Says

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—The key in the lock turned, and Kid Howard's gymnasium, for 25 years a famous training establishment for heroes of the prize ring, closed its doors today

Lack of public interest in professional boxing was responsible, Howard, who has seen champions come and go, believes that professional boxing is dying and that it will be supplanted by the amateurs.

"And it will be just too bad," Howard said. Himself a former featherweight, Howard believes he knows whereof he speaks.

"Boxing is a sport for men and not young boys," he explained. "The result, in my judgment, will be distressing if they allow young boys to engage in the game. The results of early training and bruises in the ring will bring about mental, perhaps physical, injuries if there is not close supervision over their conditioning and their performances in the ring."

In the heyday of ring prosperity, Kid Howard's establishment was the training quarters for Freddie Welsh, Jack Dempsey, Jess Willard, Benny Leonard, Kid Herman Jimmy Wilde Gene Tunney, Harry Greb and others. In fact, every outstanding fighter of the day.

While these ring heroes went through their pace the public was admitted at 25 cents a head. In the couple of years, however the admission fee was cut down and finally it got so that it was no longer profitable for Howard to keep open

"The sport is dying," he said, reminiscently. "There are not enough good boxers or good attractions left. I can see no future for the sport. There are more clubs and stadiums in the country with no outstanding boxers to fill them or even come close.

"Why, in the last two years, with the exception of three or four outstanding contests, no professional bout in Chicago has drawn more than a thousand dollars. Think that over. Meanwhile, the amateurs have drawn anywhere from twenty to forty thousand."

Howard recalled that Dempsey, at the height of his career drew 80,000 spectators to his establishment just to see the former heavyweight champion go through his paces. Joe Jess Willard Sam Langford, Gene Tunney, Benny Leonard and others were correspondingly as popular but those good old days have passed, Howard believes.

So today his training establishment is like a morgue, with no action of the boxing bag sounding through the place, no swish of a boxing glove landing on a sparring partner's chin.

The sport is dying, Howard says

GEORGE LIKED IN TITLE FRAY

Ed Don George is a favorite to defend successfully his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion against "Jumping" Joe Savoldi at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

George has been training at Jerry Buckley's Gym on Friend st. The champion is in fine condition and expressed himself as confident he will win from Savoldi in straight falls.

In their last match Savoldi scored the first toss against the champion. He tipped George over with his famous Notre Dame drop kick.

Tomorrow night George will speak over a radio hook-up to Adm. Byrd's ship, which is headed towards the South Pole

Joe Malcewicz will appear in the semifinal bout against "Man Mountain" Dean. The "Panther" wanted to be in Detroit tomorrow night to hurl another challenge at Jim London, who is wrestling Cyclone Kozar, but was persuaded to remain here to wrestle Dean.

Earl McCready, who won a place in the ratings of the world's 10 leading wrestlers, will oppose "Tiny" Roebuck. Casey Kazanian will clash with Hank Oswald. Ernie Dusek will oppose John Spellman. Chief Jules Strongbow will tackle Al Pinkham, Vic Christie will meet Pat O'Hara, Hal Humberg takes on Axel Anderson. While Freddy Moran will have George Linnehan as an opponent

Mrs. Baker, Billiard Champ, in Finals

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Gertrude McElroy of New York, the defending champion, faced the final schedule of the women's national amateur pocket billiards title today with two straight victories and big prospects of repeating.

She defeated Mrs. Irene Hummel of New York, in her opening match yesterday, 38 to 15 and followed up with a 35 to 25 victory over Georgia Veatch of Chicago last night. Miss Veatch defeated Mrs. Hummel, 35 to 21 in the other match.

Milton Tops Needham High

Leading all the way, Milton High pinned a 30-21 defeat on Needham High at the Milton High gym. Milton led, 14-7, at the half, with Elbin Fletcher heading the attack, scoring 12 points.

Needham seconds nipped Milton seconds, 11 to 9, in the other game.

Walker Slated for Veeck's Berth

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—Elevation of William Walker to the presidency of the Chicago Cubs was expected at the annual meeting of the club today

The office has nominally been vacant since the death last October of William L. Veeck. It was indicated that P. K. Wrigley would continue as chairman of the executive board, with Walker moving up from the post of first vice-president, John O. Seys becoming first vice-president and Charles A. Weber, secretary-treasurer of the Los Angeles Pacific Coast league club moving in as second vice-president.

Since the death of Mr. Veeck, Walker has acted as spokesman for the club.

Crossley, Zach Lead Bike Racers

Milwaukee, Jan. 10 (INS)—Freddie Zach and Al Crossley, the Swiss-American team, early today were leading the field in the six-day bicycle race here. Zach and Crossley came out of second place with a gained lap last night to take the lead from Piet Van Kempen and Jules Audy.

Equipoise Grows New Hoof; Will Return to Barrier

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 10 (AP)—Equipoise, the little queen of the turf, is growing a new hoof in preparation for another assault on the money-winning record of $376,731 held by Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau.

The C. V. Whitney Canadian colt on work of 5:00 3/5, will return to the racing wars this spring and summer, providing training does not again injure his foot.

Equipoise raced with practically a game leg for the past two seasons, yet was able to defeat almost every horse that ran against him. Most of his hoof was cut away recently in an effort to clear up the trouble, but it is growing again, and his handlers expect him to be ready for training early in the spring

It was first planned to retire equipoise to the stud, but trainer T. J. Healey says Whitney has decided to give "Eky another chance to eclipse Sun Beau's record. Meanwhile the little Chestnut is wallowing in the mud on the Whitney Farm, thoroughly enjoying himself while growing a new hoof, which may prove to be golden if he wins many rich races.

RED SOX TO START PRACTICE AT SARASOTA CAMP MARCH 4

HARRIS SEES MONEY BERTH FOR HOSE

By JOE CASHMAN

Manager Stanley "Bucky" Harris rolled into town from Washington today with the announcement that his Red Sox batterymen would report for Spring training at Sarasota, Fla., on Sunday, March 3, or one day earlier than the Braves pitchers and catchers will show up at St. Petersburg. The Fenway fielders will be called out one week later

So the batterymen will have two weeks and the supporting cast one week to round into shape for the first exhibition game with "Bucky's" former charges, the Detroit Tigers

Harris revealed that he is a believer in the single practice session theory

"One good workout daily brings the best results," the Sox pilot declared. "Two drills invariably find the boys loafing in one and often in both.

"Bucky" looks as young and fit as when he was the boy boss of the Senators and the class of the American League second-sackers a decade ago. Regular exercise keeps him that way

He's been working out daily since before the holidays in a Washington gym with Joe Judge veteran first sacker, and Billy Werber, young infielder of the Sox

"Bucky" has hinted right along that Judge would be one of his coaches in the coming campaign. He'll definitely decide upon his assistants after a conference with General Manager Eddie Collins later today. He'll have two, and it is expected that Cambridge Tommy Daly, who did a fine job of handling the pitchers at the Fens last summer, will be the other right eye

The Sox new manager is delighted with the trades

"We may not win the pennant," he asserted, "but I don't see how we can be kept out of the money."

Naturally "Bucky" has been forced to make several changes in the tentative starting lineup he named on his last visit

At the moment he is counting on Morgan at first, Bishop at second, Walters at third, Cissell at short, Reynolds in center, Cooke in right and Johnson in left. Ferrell of course, will do the bulk of the catching

BISHOP, JOHNSON SET

However, Bishop and Johnson are the only fielders who appear certain of their jobs at this time 'Bucky' admitted

"This boy Solters, from Baltimore may throw a wrench in my outfield plans", he observed. If the ex-Oriole hits half as well as reporter, he'll command plenty consideration. It may prove profitable to let him spell Cooke against southpaw pitching.

"I have an infield problem, except at second-base, where Max Bishop couldn't be improved upon, but I'm not losing any sleep over it.

"I think that demotion to New Orleans was the best thing that could have happened to Eddie Morgan. He realizes now that he must tend strictly to his knitting to remain in fast company. And to make him remember it, we have Dale Alexander. All of which convinces me Eddie will have one of his best seasons at the Fens.

"Cissell can be a great shortstop. He needs only to stay in shape. If he fails me, I'll still have Werber, who has been telling me daily in Washington that he is going to be my shortstop.

"I have great faith in Walters at third. Werber, too, has shown he can play the bag. That's good insurance, but I don't expect to collect on it. I look for Walters to develop into an outstanding player."

BEST FOR GROVE

'Lefty' Grove won't be worked as hard here as he was in Philly, 'Bucky' indicated. The southpaw ace pitched in almost 50 games for Connie Mack last season. His new boss feels that is too much punishment for a great pitcher

"Grove will start in turn and finish up occasionally. He won't spend most of his spare moments in the bull pen."

"He's not my only pitcher, you know. Welland and Rhodes should enjoy a fine season and from the appearance of Pipgras and Johnson in the South, I would say that both have recovered from their injuries and would be as good as ever. And I'm not forgetting Walberg and Ostermuller."

Harris thinks the champion Washington Senators are still the club to beat. He looks for the best-balanced race in years with the Red Sox, White Sox and Tigers showing much improvement and the Yanks, Indians and Athletics slipping to some extent

Rambler Hoop Team Wins 21st Straight

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 10 (US)—Notre Dame tied its all-time winning record here by winning its 21st consecutive game, 30 to 28, from Marquette before a howling crowd of 6000 persons

Tonight's game was a nip-and-tuck affair from the beginning. The score as tied at 2-all less than a minute after the opening whistle. It was tied five more times subsequently

EDDIE COLLINS BUCKY HARRIS

Bucky Harris visited Eddie Collins at Fenway Park today. It was the new Sox manager's first glimpse of the park since reconstruction work started seriously. General Manager Collins is pointing out the proposed changes in the layout. Duffy's Cliff has been torn away, and all the stands are being rebuilt. It will be a new park, a new club and in general a new deal at Fenway Park this season, thanks to Tom Yawkey's millions. (Boston American photo.)

Shots at the Basket

By FRANK O'CONNELL

The outstanding game in Boston tonight appears to be that between Winthrop K. of C., latest addition to the Greater Boston League, and Greenwood Community of Dorchester. Greenwood is the sensation of the league at present, with a winning streak of six straight, but Winthrop has Jud Rex, ex-Harvard captain, and Gordon Connors, former star at Boston College, in its lineup.

Another fine game will take place at the Charlestown Armory, where the Philadelphia Colored Giants will be the attraction against the headquarters five. The Giants are no strangers to the Charlestown fans and their appearance always means a packed house

Plainfield, Ct., one of the best basketball towns in New England will be the scene of a thrilling game tonight, when the Boston Whirlwinds meet the Plainfield pros. These teams have met many times before and have never failed to put up a good game

After this game the Whirlwinds have three other hard games to play this week being at Webster tomorrow night, Brookfield Saturday and Quincy Sunday

The Retail Stores League have three games scheduled tomorrow night at the Army and Navy Y M C A., City sq Charlestown R. H. White plays Chandler's Jordan Marsh and Ward's Stationery and Gilchrist's and Filene's. Last week in the opening games of the league, Whites, Gilchrist's and Jordan Marsh were the winners by large scores with Gilchrist's and Jordan's appearing to be the outstanding teams in the league

The Quincy town team under the management of Felix Martell, is comprised of ex-college and high school players and will play all their games at the Quincy Coliseum. They open their season next Sunday by playing the Boston Whirlwinds

Boston Y. M. H. A. should derive a world of good out of that defeat last Saturday by the New York Nationals. A defeat sometimes is just the tonic needed to make a team realize that they are not unbeatable, and gives them a chance to correct many of their mistakes before they meet their next strong opponent

Connecticut Picked Over B. U. Tankmen

Storrs, Ct., Jan 10—State natators are favored to beat the Boston University varsity swimmers in the first tilt of the season for either team here tonight. The Terriers will be handicapped by the absence of Capt. Dick Steele only star veteran swimmer

Arena Card

MAIN BOUTS

Pat O'Hara, Atlanta, vs Al Mercier, Montreal (two falls out of three—no time limit).

Bull Martin, Boston, vs. Nick Skotis, New York (one fall to win—no time limit).

SPECIAL BOUTS

Bob Russell, Newport, R. I., vs. Boris Demetroff, Revere.

PRELIMINARIES

Bull Curry, Chicago, vs. Harry Lewis, Chicago.

Fred Moran, Newport, R. I., vs. Al Ventres, Boston.

Tony Siano, Waltham, vs. George Taylor, New York (one fall to win—10-minute time limit).

Heavyweights will hold the limelight at Alex MacLean's wrestling show at the Arena tonight

Pat O'Hara is a choice to win over Al Mercier in the feature bout which will be decided by best two falls out of three. O'Hara's rough style of milling has made him an Arena favorite. Mercer has a better knowledge of scientific wrestling and is of the opinion he will gain the victory.

"Bull" Martin will furnish a little drama for the fans when he tangles up with Nick Skotis of New York in a finish bout which will be decided by one toss. The "Bull" will hurl a challenge at the winner of the O'Hara-Mercier go. He is also shooting for a tussle with Pat Fraley

Metcalfe to Run in Millrose Games

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—Ralph Metcalfe Marquette's negro star who won every sprint title for which he competed in 1933 and was undefeated on a European tour, will make his first indoor start of the season in the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden Feb. 3.

Trackless Track Team Everett's Sad Fate

By BILL CONNELL

A trackless track team is growing from the wreckage of [illegible] teams of past seasons as Everett high youngsters [illegible] and puddle along the parkway and streets of [illegible]

Awaiting the appointment of a new high school stadium commission by the mayor, Everett boys are minus training facilities. A new track, a 220-yard board oval at the football stadium was planned for this season. The retiring stadium commission did not want to order the track construction preferring to leave the matter to the new stadium board

USE BOSTON TRACK

The new group has not been named. Meanwhile the Everett boys have no facilities for running. Coach [illegible] Gildea takes a few by auto to the Boston Y and sees to it that another few go by street car to the Boston Y gym. The [illegible] part of the squad of 70 must work out in the streets

The proposed track would cost about $600. That sum for material only. Field Superintendent Jack [illegible] and Harry Babb, his aide and boys from the woodworking department of the high school would do the construction too.

Such an eight-lap track at the stadium with fine locker and shower facilities in the clubhouse would give Everett boys the finest training facilities in Greater Boston

Meanwhile Everett has been forced to cancel its triangular meeting with Malden and Medford because not enough boys have been conditioned for interscholastic competition. Gildea is determined to have at least a relay team on the boards this winter hence the work with the small group at the Boston Y

Bill Piseone captains the team. An able 300 yarder and dash man his ability gives the relay team a good start. Ritchie Underwood, a hurdler, will be converted into a relay runner. John Yahoodik probably will win one place on the quartet, with Frank Mascianica or Ed Tumaz in the fourth position. Both the latter boys are prospective 600 stars

WILL HAVE RELAY

John Palding, and Fred Garney 1000; Ralph Kelley, and Joe King, 600; George Davis, and Tom Sorrenti, dash and 300; Bill Furness, shot are other prominent members of the squad

"If we get the board track it will be of major importance in developing a track team and building many boys physically," said Gildea today. "But we at least will have a relay team in competition, this season

"Since our stars of the past few seasons have graduated, this season will be a third period of building. From the squad of 70-odd including many sophomores, fine trackmen are developing. Another year and these boys will be ready to battle any kind of school teams."

Harvard Swimmers Face Boys' Club

The Harvard varsity natators will swim the Boston Boys' Club in the Harvard pool at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The Crimson water team has been undefeated this season in meets with Bowdoin and M. I. T.

It is questionable whether the meet with Amherst scheduled for Saturday will be held

Lord Jeffs Take Middlebury, 6-0

Williamstown, Jan. 10—Williams opened its hockey season with a victory over Middlebury here the score being 6 to 0. The purple was hard pressed in the first period

Rob McCoy of the Lowell House, Harvard, swimming team set a new house record of 32 1-5 seconds in the 50-yard backstroke, but his team was defeated 38 to 24, by Adams House.

Harvard's varsity sextet will attempt a comeback tonight when it plays Boston University in the first of a two-game series at the Boston Garden. The Crimson received perhaps the worst defeat in its history from McGill on Monday night. But it is conceded by the fact that every other college team has received practically the same treatment at the hands of the Canadian wonder team

Coach Joe Stubbs may shake up his lines for tonight's game. If Ben Ferris is able to play, he will be at his center position. Otherwise Calloway, a sophomore one of the few players who showed to any advantage against McGill, will center the first line

Arthur Duffey, sophomore wing also played a fine game against the Redmen and should be promoted to the first line. Fran Gleason varsity defenseman, came out of the McGill game with his forehead bandaged and taped

MALONEY EASY SHOT FOR RISKO

Miami Fla. Jan 10—Jim Maloney, the South Boston strong boy who once rolled them in the aisles as a puncher you would travel many miles to see, is just another disillusioned fighter today

And Johnny Rebound Risko the Cleveland Baker Boy is just one grin from ear to ear. Johnny will never be champion, but he can still drop 'em and stay the route himself

Such was proved here last night when Risko took an easy decision from Maloney over the 10 round route. Maloney was fighting his first fight under the tutelage of Pa Stribling

Rubbery John swarmed off his stool at the opening gong and proceeded to belabor Shamus with everything known to the Queensberry code

In the fourth canto Risko dropped Jimmy with a smart left hook to the chin, followed by a right to the head. It had our Jim hearing the surf pounding on South Boston's Strandway for a good five count. The bell saved James as Risko bubbled and puffed in for the kill

All the punches Maloney could throw, however, the Baker Boy absorbed as a dunked doughnut does coffee, and in return Johnny had Shamus leaning over backward with his peculiar rushing style, hooking a left and then driving the right after it

BAILEY MISHAP CAUSES BRUINS SLUMP

By BILL GRIMES

After dropping their fourth game in a row the Bruins are off on their second whirl around the Western circuit opening tomorrow night in Chicago and then jumping to Detroit for a Sunday night engagement

Since the suspension of Eddie Shore the Bruins have been struggling to keep within sight of the other American Division clubs. They have played 10 games without Eddie Shore and although they were able to defeat during the first six games a [illegible] has cost them the last four

The unfortunate part of the Bruin slump, is the fact that they have been on the winning end of only one game at home since they defeated the Americans on Dec 9. The fans often times will excuse defeats on the road but they do not enjoy watching the Bruins lose at the Garden

Personally, I am of the opinion that the Bruins failure is due to a mental condition. The players are human and after the "Ace" Bailey accident it is only natural that they should slow up to a certain extent. An accident such as that which Bailey suffered is bound to take its toll from most of the players, who participated in that contest

In all probability, the players never realized the chances they take out on the ice. Now, they appreciate the risk and for a time they are apt to be below normal form

The Bruins are now well entrenched in last place in their division, two full games behind Rangers and Detroit, who are in a second place tie, due to the Blue Shirt victory over the Red Wings last night in New York

The breaks are never with losing clubs and the Bruins are no exception. They are scheduled to play two American division clubs before they return from their present trip. Although they are not expected to gain any ground at Chicago's expense tomorrow night the Bruins may hold off Rangers and Detroit even though they lose to the Hawks for the [illegible] are [illegible] for a set-to in Ottawa and the Red Wings are in Montreal playing the Maroons tomorrow

The Bruins were not impressive last night principally because their nemesis, Roy "Shrimp" Worters, was in the nets for the Americans. Worters enjoyed one of his usual nights, that is, the usual night he has whenever he is pitted against the Bruins. He made any number of almost impossible saves for the Bruins were going around through and now and then even over the outer defense for close-up shots at him, only to have the midget bat or kick them out of danger

There is no question in my mind that if there had been any other goalie in the league guarding the nets for the Americans last night, the Bruins would have scored enough goals to break their losing streak.

The Americans moved up to within two points of Ottawa by beating the Bruins and now figure that they are very much in the running for a playoff berth in the Canadian division especially with Les Canadiens winning a 3 to 2 decision over Maroons. At this stage of the race only three points separate, Maroons, Ottawa and Americans with the Flying Frenchmen two games out in front of their city rivals

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

ATTORNEY WILLIAM Corbett of Somerville who is dead at his home at 50 Walnut street Somerville, was one of the most intelligent boxers ever developed in this part of the country.

Corbett was the New England [illegible] when [illegible] years of age and a fresh[illegible] at Somerville high school. He later became a national champion in the 125-pound class and then graduated into the professional ranks where he boxed as a featherweight and lightweight

Mr Boston

Corbett never was a rugged type of fighter. He was fast and [illegible] [illegible] world [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] fine art of boxing.

Corbett first boxed under the direction of Johnny Buckley and later cast his lot with Jackie Williams who guided him in most of his professional bouts

During his career as a professional boxer Corbett [illegible] college [illegible] at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He [illegible] from the Harvard Law School was [illegible] to [illegible] Massachusetts and then was elected a member of the House of Representatives

Corbett always [illegible] interest in the boxing game. He was named a member of the [illegible] committee which [illegible] [illegible] boxing [illegible] [illegible] had [illegible] [illegible] of the game and was instrumental in putting through some needed reforms

I think boxing prolonged Corbett's life. It developed his body and gave him the strength he might otherwise not have acquired. Corbett did much to bring credit to the boxing game and his loss will be mourned by his thousands of friends throughout New England

Schmeling and Levinsky

MAX SCHMELING and King Levinsky will battle in the Chicago stadium despite the wishes of Mrs. Lena Levinsky who says the Kingfish will not take a punch at the German unless paid more than 22½ per cent of the gate. The Chicago story looks like baloney to me. I think Levinsky wouldn't hesitate to fight a dozen heavyweights for the $15,000 or so he will pick up for batting Der Max

Lena has stressed the fact that the Kingfish wasn't once pounded to the canvas during 20 rounds of warfare with Max Baer. The latter is a harder puncher than Schmeling as he proved when he knocked out the former world's heavyweight champion in their [illegible] in New York [illegible] summer.

THERE IS SOME talk that Schmeling will take on Steve Hamas in Philadelphia for Gunnis Taylor before meeting Levinsky in Chicago. The Hamas bout would be considered in the nature of a warm up match Schmeling has never been keen for such affairs as he realizes there is always some risk every time he steps into action. It is likely he will take on Levinsky without taking any chances against Hamas

Random Shots at Target

JACKIE DAVIS who now weighs 11[illegible] pounds has been matched by Tony Stevens to meet Coacoa Kid in a 10-round bout at New Haven on January 15 . . . Jim Browning's win over Ray Steele in New York eliminated another leading challenger from his path . . . Jim Londos will oppose Joe Stecher in Detroit on Friday night . . . The bout is being advertised as for the heavyweight championship of the world . . . The wrestlers should make good their promise to shoot it out and determine who is the better man . . . Paul Bowser is in charge of the athletic end of the program at the Shriners convention at Mechanics Building tomorrow night . . . Steve Salek will oppose Victor Lotti in one of the boxing bouts . . . There will be several mat contests.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

The special meeting of the N. H. L. board of governors may have been called for the purpose of taking up the Eddie Shore case but there will be even more important business transacted before Pres. Frank Calder bangs his gavel for adjournment.

There is much more back of this coming special meeting than the public surmises. I know that Maple Leafs have no intentions of crucifying Eddie Shore, for the Bruin star has no stronger boosters on the circuit than in Toronto. Due to the "gag" rule, it is doubtful if the fans will receive any definite news as to what really transpired back of the closed doors, other than an announcement that Eddie was completely exonerated.

"Shrimp" Worters who has always given the Bruins troubles since the days he was in the nets for Pittsburgh Yellowjackets gave one of his best exhibitions last night despite the fact that he played with a broken finger. Time and again, Bruins sifted through the Americans outer defense but they were unable to best Worters until late in the third period, when Peggy O'Neil bounced his own rebound off "Shrimp's" shoulder and into the cage

Capt. Marty Barry and Lone Hitchman were stepping at their prettiest last night. Barry staged some very clever rushes and would have beaten any other goalie for at least three tallies while "Hitch" not only played his usual strong defensive game but featured with a number of fine rushes

George Mallinson was [illegible] water during the first half of the game, giving Babe Siebert a 10-minute misconduct penalty apparently for speaking out of turn and Nels Stewart a major for heaving Al Murray into the boards. As soon as the Americans scored two goals the fans laid off the officials and directed their criticism at the players.

Andy Mulligan is getting a tryout with the Rhode Island Reds who are short of defense men, with George Nichols on the hospital list with a broken rib. Mulligan never received an opportunity to show at his best while with the Cubs but he is liable to catch on with the Reds.

Frank Burke the big candy man from Rochester, N. Y. watched brother Eddie strut his stuff with the Americans last night. After the game Frank remarked that it looked like a victory for Eddie Powers with three former Cubs annexing all of the scoring points for the Americans.

Bert McInenly has already become the fair haired boy with the Cub fans. McInenly turned in a thrilling game against the Reds and will be out to duplicate his performance on Saturday at the Garden

Now I learn that Donnie Smillie was on the reserve list of a number of N. H. L. clubs but that he refused to sign any contract which made it possible for him to be shipped to a minor league, which was the intentions of all clubs, except the Bruins. So he signed with Boston.

Ness Crutchfield, the McGill star, was the property of the New York Americans. Crutchfield was on the Amerks' reserve list but was sold to Maroons with big Russ Ayres who was sent down the river to Quebec

And so until long into the night—or at least until such a time as New York manager had to rush for the midnight train, Joe Simpson was in conference with the Boston powers, who were attempting to put over a deal. Joe would have talked turkey if he could have taken Red Beattie back to Gotham with him.

BUCKLAND SEES IMPROVEMENT UNDER WAY

Finds Signs Bright in Various Lines for Year Ahead

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

Chairman E. G. Buckland of the New Haven road, also president of the Railroad Credit Corp., tells this column [illegible] will witness less distress and [illegible] more [illegible] people than did 1933.

"If the dollar is to be devalued we should support the Administration in withholding the new value until it may be fixed without damage to the nation in international trade or in relation to the value of foreign currencies. In other words—if repudiation is necessary, then stabilization must await international events and with 'our fears,' we should support the President," Mr. Buckland tells us.

"Our fate triumphant o'er our fears," we

The quotation is from the poet Longfellow's "Building of the Ship." It can be remarked in passing that our New England [illegible] to be well "up" in literature. Some will recall, for further example, that President Matt Jones of New England Telephone in a report to stockholders quoted from Increase Mather, [illegible] writer of Colonial days.

"The evidences which people generally refer to as indicating prosperity—industrial production, consumption and distribution by transportation agencies, are all showing improvement over a year ago; commodity prices, particularly agricultural products, are higher, more people are employed and purchasing power thus increased. The picture would be complete if it could be said that there is such an increase in confidence as would be evidenced by a substantial revival of capital expenditures for construction and expansion of industry," adds Mr. Buckland.

"I find this lacking and believe it is due to fear on the part of the investor as to the value of the money which he may receive as a return on his investment. This fear is based not so much upon the admitted repudiation by the Government of its obligation to pay in gold and the forbidding by the same Government of its citizens to fulfill their like obligations. All of this has been done before temporarily and in an emergency, but with the distinct avowal at the time of the purpose of the Government and the individual to keep his promise when the emergency was over.

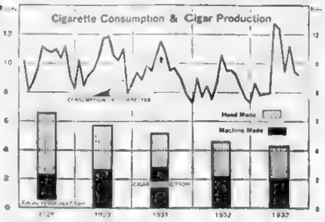
"Today repudiation, while caused by the emergency, is not accompanied by promised restitution when the emergency has passed. On the contrary, it predicts a devalued dollar to a point not yet disclosed. To restore confidence there should also be some assurance that in future emergencies further devaluation shall not become a habit."

Cigarettes in Favor



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

[illegible] It may be noted that cigarette con[illegible] sistance to the decline in general buying power which is one of the results of the depression.

One may conclude from the disinclination of the cigarette line to fall with the income line that smokers were willing to make sacrifices of many things before they denied themselves the satisfaction of their accustomed fags. Although some inroads were made by revival of the roll-your-own habit, the fact remains that cigarette consumption on the whole [illegible] will be substantially above 1932 and probably better than 1931.

[illegible] cigar consumption shows a steady decline. Cigars [illegible] fundamental trend toward other [illegible] tend to join the ranks of cigarette users and avoid the strong tobacco diet [illegible].

Continued improvement in business will unquestionably spur cigar consumption. To what extent it will be able to recapture boom levels remains a question.

These two lines have a very direct relation to the prosperity which the inflationary and other recovery measures of the administration are seeking to restore. If individual income rise the effect will be noticed first upon luxury and semi-luxury sales rather than upon bread, butter, meat and milk.

The depression made no serious impression upon the aggregate consumption of the latter items. Prosperity will likewise show only a moderate effect upon their consumption. Such objects of expenditure as movies, football games, candies, flowers and cigarettes are [illegible] category.

BANK PROGRESS BEING MADE RAPIDLY

Changes in Rule of Chase Are Cited by Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Jan. 10—You can now put your money into banks with [illegible] feeling of safety.

The banking business has re[illegible] than any [illegible] The banking business has received more cleaning than any other. "It needed it," you may say.

B. C. Forbes

Yesterday there was very significant house cleaning in the largest bank of them all, the Chase National Bank of New York.

Bluntly, Wiggin men were deposed and Aldrich (Rockefeller) men enthroned.

The Chase's new president, H. Donald Campbell, early made an impression upon Winthrop W. Aldrich when the latter took command of the Equitable Trust Co. before its absorption by the Chase just as he had long before made an impression upon the late Charles A. Austin before his institution was merged with the Equitable.

Like Aldrich, Don Campbell received legal training. But his personality, due in some measure doubtless to his experiences in the Northwest, is very different from that commonly associated with lawyers and judges.

Mr. Aldrich himself still retains the dignified judicial poise. Don Campbell possesses the characteristics popularly associated with Westerners. A physical giant, he radiates cordiality, geniality, the joy of living. Employes like to see him, men like to do business with him. He breathes openness, frankness, friendliness—as did Charles S. McCain, whom he succeeds as Aldrich's right-hand executive.

A clean sweep has now been made of "Wiggin men." No banking disclosures have made a more unfavorable impression upon the public than those concerning the money-making activities indulged in by Albert H. Wiggin.

The whole Chase episode typifies the transformation under way in American banking. A new banking deal has been overwhelmingly demanded by the people. And a new deal is materializing.

Take this frank admission, just received by this column from the senior partner of a prominent investment firm that possesses courage enough to spend money on preparing to do a larger business than ever before, notwithstanding the oft-repeated declaration that the securities act has killed investment banking for ever and a day.

"I have had the feeling that, despite the deserved odium under which the general run of investment bankers are now laboring and notwithstanding the most rabid desire to fetter, if not eliminate, investment banking through national legislation, the need for the service of investment bankers still exists and when more reasonable conditions prevail will force itself to the front.

"If Congress will reasonably amend the federal securities act, I believe great impetus will be given to the recovery program of the administration through the increased investment which will be made in capital assets and that this will far outweigh the artificial stimuli through public works, etc., being engineered by the government."

UNCERTAINTY IS SEEN IN STREET

By and large, the Wall Street rank and file is in a high state of uncertainty.

Many seem to think that stocks will have to go lower first to build a base for an extended rise . . . A decline, however, isn't likely to be serious unless the news should turn unexpectedly sour . . . The last few days have indicated there is little stock for sale around these levels.

The rails show possibilities of providing leadership here, and strength in their bonds may be significant . . . improvement in traffic is something to capitalize.

Rumor has it that a new [illegible] price rise is in the making. This is expected to be ten per cent, and to take place before the month is out . . . Added to the fancy earnings liquor companies are reported to have had in December was $1 a share for National Distillers.

The ups and downs of the motor shares so far merely represent ideas of traders who are trying to guess the big money makers of the year after taking a peek at the auto show.

Guesses are beginning to come out on the U. S. Steel report for the December quarter and the year, which will come out at the end of this month . . . The corporation will be plenty in the red, but it will look almost black in comparison with 1932.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LEADERS

WALL St. circles heard today that there will be definite action on Eastern railroad passenger fares within next two weeks with "60-40" chance that they will be reduced. Eastern roads, which balked on the reductions that went into effect on Western roads on Dec. 1, have been closely watching traffic figures on western rail road. Whether Eastern carriers will reduce their fares as much as Western roads depends upon decision of presidents as does the removal of Pullman surcharge.

Rail Orders Are Showing Increase

Rail orders are showing a steady increase. Announcement today was that Atchinson has placed orders for total of 33,800 tons of rail. Allocations follow: 23,000 tons to Colorado Iron & Fuel Co., delivery to start at once; 6800 tons to Illinois Steel Co.; 1700 tons to Inland Steel Co., to be delivered by April 1 and 2300 tons to Bethlehem Steel Corp to be delivered at Galveston.

Chrysler Absorbs Selling Nicely

Chrysler has been absorbing selling nicely this week, and recorded moderate gains in numerous transactions today. It should be remembered that for a long time this stock has been a feature of the market in strength and volume. Naturally, a fairly large public following has been brought about and many brokers are carrying the stock for their clients, some of whom have profits as well as additional stock bought above current levels. Chrysler's business has shown almost spectacular improvement right along, with record business in some departments, but the stock has been discounting this for weeks.

Fresh Gains Made for Grain Values

Chicago, Jan. 10—Fresh upturns in grain values took place today, prompted partly by suggestions that government figures on domestic farm reserves of wheat would prove bullish. Absence of moisture relief Southwest, together with indications of improved milling demand, were also a factor.

Opening ⅛ to 1 cent higher wheat afterward rose further. Corn started ⅜-⅝ up, and subsequently held near the initial range.

Investment Trusts Buy Oils and Motors

First six investment trusts to issue year-end reports of their operations show sales of equities to have been concentrated largely in the utility list, while a good proportion of the expansion of portfolios recently undertaken represented shares of automobile and oil companies, according to the Standard Statistics Company of New York.

American Dollar Higher in London

London, Jan. 10 (AP) — United States dollar gained ⅜ cent to the pound on the foreign exchange market today and closed at 5.08¾ compared with the overnight quotation of 5.09¼ to the pound.

$34.06 Is Gold Price as Kept by Treasury

Washington, Jan. 10 (INS)—For the seventeenth consecutive business day, the government price for newly mined gold remained unchanged today at $34.06 per ounce.

Boston Wool Mart Trading Is Quiet

"A scattered, quiet business is being transacted in 64s and finer territory wools. Sales are mostly very moderate in volume. Strictly combing graded 64s and finer territory wools are being quoted at 84-86c, scoured basis, with very little of this class moving. Demand runs more to the shorter staple wools. Graded French combing 64s and finer territory wools move occasionally at 81-83c, scoured basis, while graded clothing staple brings 78-80c, scoured basis," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Closing on London Exchange Is Steady

London, Jan. 10—Closing was steady on the London Stock Exchange today. British Government issues, rail shares and industrials were the firmest of investment buying and the optimistic business outlook. Paris closed mixed and Berlin better.

Steel Operations Holding Unchanged

BOSTON STOCKS SHOW GAINS

Gains ranging from fractions to three or more points ruled in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Utilities were the features of the session, with American Telephone shooting up more than 3 points. New England Telephone and General Electric were at fractionally higher levels. Edison Electric showed a gain of better than a point.

On the transfer of five shares Boston Elevated rose 2⅞ points. The sale of two shares then appeared on the tape for a net gain of 4⅞ points.

Atchison led the carrier group upward, advancing more than a point. New Haven and Pennsylvania were fractionally higher. Boston & Maine prior preferred moved against the general trend, sagging fractionally, while the C stamped issue was a point higher.

Bigelow Sanford was at a new high on a run-up of well over a point. American Woolen preferred and Pacific Mills were at slightly higher levels.

STOCKS HIGHER WITH TRADING PACE SLOW

New York, Jan. 10—With the trading pace rather slow, leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange today, moved up under a steady demand for motors, alcohols, steels and various other industrials. The higher quotations carried into the late trading and rails also responded with advances of fractions to a point or more. Case was strong, gaining around 5 points.

In the last hour metals were slightly irregular, U. S. Smelting dropping back nearly 2 points. American Telephone, U. S. Steel preferred, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Santa Fe were up 2 to around 3.

General Motors, Case and Du Pont improved a point or more.

In the first hour gains of one to two or more points were scattered through the list. U. S. Steel preferred was up two points, while the common ruled a shade higher. American Telephone was up over two points. Allied Chemical gained two points.

Atchison added over a point. Lackawanna, Delaware & Hudson, Kansas City Southern and New York & Harlem showed gains of a point or better.

Issues showing gains of a point or more included American Commercial, Alcohol, Atlantic Coast Line, Case, Celanese, Continental Can, Chrysler, First National Stores and Western Union.

Sales to noon approximated 450,000 shares.

Textile Activity Seen on Big Scale

Activity in the textile industry during 1933 was on a much larger scale than reported for the previous year, the Textile Organon, published by the Tubize Chatillon Corporation points out in its current issue.

In the case of rayon consumption (exclusive of acetate yarn), this, the paper states, established a new high record for all time, being 31 per cent above 1932 and 22 per cent above 1931, which was the previous record year. Complete details covering actual figures on consumption are expected within the next ten days.

Nickel Plate and Burlington Busier

Revenue freight handled by New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway in week ended January 6 increased 22.4 per cent over corresponding week of 1933. In preceding week loadings were 13.4 per cent above a year ago. Loadings on lines of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, during week ended January 6 were 11.5 above like 1933 period, against a gain of 19.3 per cent over year ago in preceeding week.

Bar Gold Up in London

London, Jan. 10 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 4½ pense to 127s 1d (U. S. equivalent 532.28 on basis of sterling opening at $5.08.)

Retail Food Costs Continue to Drop

Washington, Jan. 10 (INS)—Retail food prices continued to recede during the two weeks' period ending Dec. 19, the decline amounting to 1½ per cent, the Labor Department announced today.

Farm prices dropped two points between Dec. 13 and 20, the department of agriculture reported. Commodities bought by farmers remained level, it was pointed out, so that farm purchasing power was down.

British "Big Five" Profits Are Larger

London, Jan. 10 (AP)—Complete returns of the "big five" banks of the United Kingdom today showed their aggregate profits in the year past were 1.75 per cent higher than in 1932. In every instance, the banks maintained the 1933 dividend rates.

Total net profits for the "big five" in 1933 were $41,890,000. The banks are the Midland, Lloyd's, National Provincial, Barclay's and Westminster.

Spalding Has Lost

Reports of A. G. Spalding & Bros. and subsidiaries (sporting goods) for year ended Oct. 31, 1933, show net loss of $1,962,002. This compares with net loss of $2,660,260 in preceding fiscal year.

CREDIT OF U. S. IS STUDIED BY HANEY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University.

New York, Jan. 10—One interesting point brought up by the proposed jump in our government debt is the way that changes in the value of the dollar will affect government credit.

The President and some of his advisers have been insisting that the purchasing power of the debtor's dollar must be kept constant. Over and over again we have been told that debts contracted at 1926 prices must be made payable in 1926 dollars.

Accordingly, it has been maintained that we must raise prices 40 per cent higher than they now are in order to "lighten the burden of debt." The argument has been that by reducing the value of the dollar, debtors will, somehow or other, find it easier to get hold of dollars.

Partly for this purpose, the President decided to take us off the gold standard, adopted the Prof. Warren gold buying "policy," and in other ways has sought to force the purchasing power of the dollar down.

So far as we have been advised, these policies are still in force. The strong statement that prices must be raised, and that raise them we will, by one means or another, has not been retracted. The sudden announcement that we would buy gold, not as an expedient but as a "policy" has not been withdrawn. And that statement meant a deliberate lowering of the dollar in foreign exchange in an attempt to raise our prices.

One great object has been to give an advantage to debtors, which, of course, means taking away an advantage from creditors. The idea is to help debtors by hurting creditors—to make loans more desirable to borrowers and less desirable to lenders.

Now the government is proposing to make itself the largest debtor on earth. It is putting itself in the position of borrowing 10,000 million dollars in six months. How does this condition tie up with the "debt lightening" and price raising policies?

The government finds that in order to borrow there must be lenders. To become a large debtor it must find large creditors. In order to float bonds its credit must be good.

When the government approaches a prospective creditor (bond buyer) he naturally says to himself, "If Uncle Sam's policy is to reduce the value of money and thus hurt creditors, I don't want to lend to him."

This is one reason why the proposed government borrowing is so difficult. We find that by hurting creditors, we hurt credit. By "helping" debtors, we make it harder for them to get loans.

The point is that by helping past debts, we hurt the future debtor. So now the administration is "soft pedaling" its dollar manipulations, and seems to encourage thoughts of "stabilization." It wants to borrow for a while.

One sure thing is that if the administration wants to spend these billions for CWA, PWA, TVA, etc., it must borrow them, and if it is to borrow successfully, it must treat creditors right.

Prospective creditors (bond buyers) are the people who have some money left.

State St. Circles Continue to Hold Neutral Position

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State st. circles continue to hold a neutral position. There is, however, a tendency to take heart at the demonstrated desire of prices to move ahead, despite the lack of leadership. The failure of volume to develop is laid at the door of cautious professionals. The fear of legislation is a damper on the usual activities of market makers, most of whom are wondering what to expect from Congress.

While wild, unruly speculation is to be deplored, there is no denying the fact that a rising stock market at this stage would aid administration recovery plans. Th psychology a rising stock market generates is hard to duplicate. On the other hand, a badly breaking market has on past occasions proving capable of dampening enthusiasm for recovery created by other forces.

MARKET ACTION GIVEN STUDY

Recent market action suggests to some observers that a sidewise movement may take the place of a reaction. Not that they think the administration, or any other agency is capable of preventing a drop, but because they think the lack of upside leadership through fear of regulation, is also keeping usually aggressive sellers on the sidelines.

Notes: We will do nothing for the present . . . If there is enough uncertainty to prevent a definite move in either direction we are much better off on the sidelines . . . Those who are inclined to get nervous during temporary upswings are reminded that bull swings usually last from 60 to 120 sessions . . . Always plenty of time to buy them.

Yesterday the industrials ate up a lot of the space between the hourly average and our barometer figure. The rails are above and must stay above 40.10. The industrials to make the picture look bullish for a turn must climb above 98.25. Good fast traders might follow on the long side for a scalping move.

In answer to an inquiry regarding Johns Manville it is only possible to say that the stock, in common with the average, is fluctuating in a narrow trading range. Breaking down to 54 flat would be a sign of weakness we would not care to see. On the upside touching 62 flat will be a suggestion of inherent strength.

This And That: Union Pacific is largely responsible for the good showing of the rail average lately . . . It could undo all the good, however, by sliding off to 112 flat . . . Atchison has also been mother's little helper on the upside . . . We hope it stays clear of 51 flat . . . Which gives it a bit more room.

The government is about to start after the first chunk of $10,000,000,000. Some people are worried. It does not seem necessary. The banks are able, and probably willing to do the job. If not the Federal Reserve banks are likely to step up and make the job a success. We would not waste any fancy worrying on this score.

POWER OUTPUT GAIN 9.7 P. C.

New York, Jan. 10—Increase of 9.7 per cent in electric power output last week over the same period last year established the sharpest gain since the week of Sept. 30.

Outturn amounted to 1,563,678,000 kilowatt hours against 1,539,002,000 in preceding week and 1,425,639,000 in same week of 1933.

In New England output was up 8.7 per cent, against a like increase in the previous week; Middle Atlantic was up 11.3 per cent against 6.2 per cent; Central Industrial, up 13 against 14.3; West Central, up 9.3 against 4.3; Southern States, up 1.3 against a decrease of 3.7; Rocky Mountain, up 19.1 against 19.5; Pacific Coast, up 3.4 against 8.6.

LEGAL NOTICES

CITY OF BOSTON
SPECIAL ELECTION

City Clerk's Office, January 10, 1934.

In accordance with the provisions of the laws concerning elections, notice is hereby given that meetings of the citizens of this city, qualified to vote for City officers, will be held in the several polling places designated for the purpose by the Board of Election Commissioners, on and all such citizens will on such date, in the several precincts in which they are entitled to vote, give in their votes "Yes" or "No" in answer to the following questions:

To obtain a full expression of opinion, voters should vote on both the following questions.

(a) If a voter desires to permit the sale of any and all alcoholic beverages in this city, he will vote "YES" on both questions.

(b) If he desires to permit the sale of wines and malt beverages only herein, he will vote "NO" on question 1 and "YES" on question 2.

(c) If he desires to prohibit the sale of any and all alcoholic beverages herein, he will vote "NO" on both questions.

1. Shall licenses be granted in this city for the sale therein of all alcoholic beverages (whisky, rum, gin, malt beverages, wines and all other alcoholic beverages)? YES / NO

2. Shall licenses be granted in this city for the sale therein of wines and malt beverages (wines and beer, ale and all other malt beverages)? YES / NO

"Shall licenses be granted in this city for the sale therein of alcoholic beverages in taverns?" YES / NO

The polls at said meeting will be opened at 10 o'clock A. M. and closed at 8 o'clock P. M.

Attest: W. J. DOYLE, City Clerk.

COOK-COOS

SOCIAL PLANNERS PREDICT DRASTIC CHANGES.

Today we present the first picture graphically depicting a feature of the new social order which will be at hand before we realize it. Instead of selfishly riding in one's own car—as we do under the Capitalistic system — a more chummy, co-operative arrangement is in the minds of the social planners. Motor cars will all be jointly owned—one car to each four persons in the land. This arrangement, carefully thought out, will permit the masses to enjoy the better things in life—such as pinochle. There will be no such thing as the pedestrian. That is—after the first few weeks.

Maybe it's hard to see where we're making much progress. But anyway, there's always a change.

It used to be the W. C. T. U. that kept good liquor away from us—while now, it seems to be the distillers.

CLEARING THINGS UP.

"A good many divorces," says Judge Sabath, of Chicago, "are averted by wives who take the trouble to wave to a husband when he leaves for work."

And a good many divorces ensue when the wife waves goodby with thumb too close to the nose.

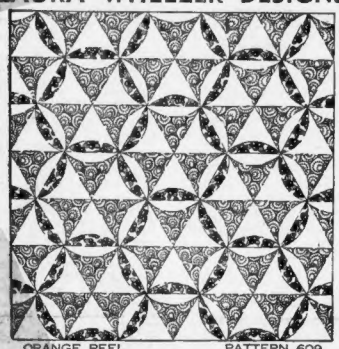
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



ORANGE PEEL PATTERN 609

Among the many quilt designs, there are some that are so outstanding that they become the heirlooms of the generation that possesses them. Orange Peel is one of these. Its hexagonal block is formed of but two pattern pieces. Simple to make—lovely in its interlocking pattern—it has indeed every right to become an heirloom. Any quiltmaker, at a glance, can see that the pleasure of making this handsome pattern will be as much as possessing the finished quilt. Though shown in three materials, this design would also readily lend itself to the use of scraps of material.

Pattern 609 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Boston American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York City.

Sales Tax Needed

President Roosevelt's budget message brings into high relief the paramount necessity for preserving and strengthening the credit of the Federal government.

In this situation, it is no longer fitting to debate whether we need to put our taxation system on a more scientific basis.

With huge borrowing needed to meet tremendous cash deficits, it behooves Congress to develop the impulse on the part of investors to buy Federal securities by improving the fiscal policies of the government.

This entails an obligation to turn from emotional, punitive, ill-considered and evilly considered taxes to tested imposts, which are known to be productive of large revenues with a minimum of discouragement to creative business enterprise.

The financing of the huge cost of the "new deal" brings to a focus the need for A GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES TAX OF AT LEAST 5 PER CENT.

Such a technique for revenue raising has proved successful in Canada and elsewhere through all stages of the economic cycle.

The sales tax has not only delivered the goods as a revenue producer, but also has come to be known as the PAINLESS TAX.

It is gratifying to learn that advocates of the sales tax in Congress are now redoubling their efforts.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, rightly points out:

"A general manufacturers' sales tax is the most equitable form of taxation that could be devised in the revenue emergency confronting the country.

"Instead of loading heavier tax burdens on business and individuals, Congress ought to adopt a general manufacturers' sales tax. Experience with such a levy in Canada and other countries has proved it is the most painless form of tax, equitable and easy to collect."

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, was correct in saying that, if President Roosevelt would give his support to a sales tax, it would go through Congress speedily.

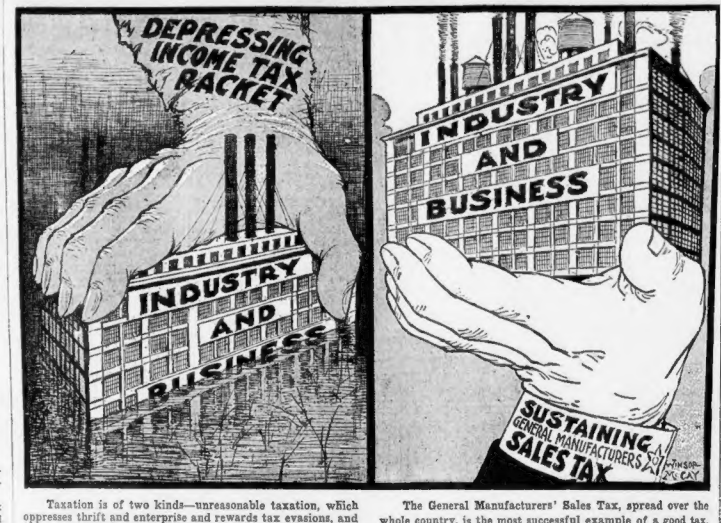
The President, once an opponent of a State's sales tax (which is an entirely different matter), has already moved partly in the direction of a national manufacturers' sales tax.

At the emergency session, he let it be known that, if Congress adopted such a sales tax, he would not veto it.

The time has come for the President to go further, and AFFIRMATIVELY RECOMMEND THIS SOUND PRINCIPLE OF TAXATION.

The psychological moment is now at hand for such a decision at the White House, since, as the President has said, the Federal credit has become THE CORNERSTONE OF THE WHOLE RECOVERY PROGRAM.

Which Hand?



Taxation is of two kinds—unreasonable taxation, which oppresses thrift and enterprise and rewards tax evasions, and just taxation, which avoids discrimination and permits productive enterprise to function freely.

A just and equitable tax actually BENEFITS business because it maintains, without unfairness, the degree of government and of social security that business itself must have for its own protection. Business is thus encouraged to go ahead.

Our discredited income tax is the world's outstanding example of a bad tax. Based on the false idea of "soaking the rich," it is easily evaded by them. Consequently its burden falls excessively on the capital industries that make employment and on the persons who work for their incomes.

The General Manufacturers' Sales Tax, spread over the whole country, is the most successful example of a good tax. It is distributed so widely that nobody feels it, and the rich pay their just share.

Canada has such a tax—and Canada calls it the "PAINLESS TAX."

Congress at its current session must choose between these two taxes—the one that bears down on business and the other that permits business to prosper.

It is up to Congress to choose rightly—let the racketeering income tax be abolished and the General Manufacturers' Sales Tax be substituted for Federal purposes.

Human Side of the News; Getting After Ghosts

By Edwin C. Hill

Ghosts are queer customers. That much, at least, may be ventured about them. They are so various and eccentric in their haunting; some like castles, some like blasted oaks. Others are contented with quite humble farm houses or a mere crumbling stone in a country graveyard.

These observations are inspired by a considerable output of literature recently on the subject of spooks—all sorts of spooks. For example, Elliott O'Donnell, who gave us "Ghosts of London," writes now in "Family Ghosts and Ghostly Phenomena" of spooks that have haunted the Bourbons, the Bonapartes and the Hohenzollerns; of family ghosts in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Germany and United States.

The underlying theme of his study of phantoms is the dreadful reality, the idea assumed in the minds of human beings only a century or two ago. As a matter of fact it is still a reality with countless persons who might hesitate to admit it. Perhaps, too, there is even a bit of evidence on their side of the case. Incredible instances do occur—inexplicable from any normal and natural point of view.

FANTASTIC STORY

Dr. Louis K. Anspacher, playwright and member of the American Society for Physical Research —the folks who are continually on the trail of ghosts—produces in "The Town Crier" the most startling, utterly fantastic and hair-raising ghost story this writer, at least, has ever stumbled upon. It is the case of Lord Dufferin, who, at various times, was the British ambassador to France, ambassador to Italy, Governor-General of India and Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada—a cool and poised statesman and man of the world, entirely ungiven to fancies, unaccustomed to strolling about in the Fourth Dimension.

Yet something occurred in his life, which considering the personality and character of Lord Dufferin, can scarcely be doubted on his relation of the facts. It was an incident—a double incident—which was carefully investigated by the French psychologist, De Morstray, and by the British Society for Psychical Research, and which, for some time, engaged even the attention of that body of men who seldom seek the guilty among the disembodied spirits, Scotland Yard.

Lord Dufferin was visiting an old friend in Ireland. The night is fine, moonlit, calm, serene. Lord Dufferin undresses, goes to bed, falls asleep, and, for no reason at all, finds himself wide awake. He feels something ominous and foreboding about him. The pale moonlight prides into his bedroom. He lights a cigarette and tries to compose himself. He feels that he is getting foolish and inconsistent, like a credulous, romantic young girl.

Through the open window a variety of sounds reach him—the stirring of the breeze in the tree, the whisper of his own bedroom curtains. But something else as well —the sound of a human being, panting and moaning.

The large French windows of his room give on to a lawn, shaded by majestic old trees. Dufferin, at the window, stands peering into the shadows of the lawn. Suddenly a figure emerges into the full light of the moon. A man staggers under an enormous weight, a boxlike thing he carries upon his shoulders. Dufferin looks closely. The box-like thing is a coffin.

Dufferin rushes from the room, across the lawn, calling out: "Look here! What have you got there?"

At the challenge the man with the burden raises his head and shows his face. Lord Dufferin gazes at a face of such ghoulish, baleful ugliness, so terribly repulsive, that he falls back a step. It is a face of such hate and contorted violence that it burns itself indelibly upon Lord Dufferin's mind. He nerves himself and calls out again: "Where are you taking that?" He strides forward a pace and wakes straight through the evil man and his evil burden!

There are no footprints on the dewy grass; nothing but the mocking moonlight and the eerie noises of the night.

Some years later the distinguished diplomat and statesman is sent to France as British Ambassador. He attends a diplomatic reception in the Grand Hotel in Paris. The foyer of the hotel is crowded with representatives of all the different countries. Dufferin's private secretary conducts his chief to a private elevator before which many gentlemen are standing, waiting to be taken above stairs. The elevator descends and the door opens and Dufferin's eye falls upon the man who is operating the elevator. Dufferin recoils with a start of horror. He stands before him the very same face which bended itself upon his memory that strange night in Ireland. The same ghoulish leer, the same contorted features, malicious countenance and squat, toad-like body.

HISTORIC ACCIDENT

A man of immense self-control, the British Ambassador makes a conventional excuse for not stepping into the car and turns away just as it begins to ascend crowded with officials. Almost at once there is a terrible crash. Cries of anguish ring in the corridors. The elevator, run by the very man Dufferin saw in Ireland—walked through on that moonlight night—has fallen from the fifth floor, crushing and mutilating all those inside the car.

The accident is historic. The newspapers of the time were filled with it. Among the dead was the mysterious elevator man. But although Scotland Yard exhausted its wide resources, the Parisian Surete took up the case, neither they nor Lord Dufferin was ever able to find out the least thing about the toad-like man with the terrible face who was thin air, coffin-burdened on a tempestuous night in Ireland, and a living creature operating the cable of a lift in Paris.

More Greedy Bankers

The banks of Massachusetts will not elevate themselves in popular estimation unless they manifest a more tender solicitude for their creditor home-owners who are in distress.

They will, in fact, earn for themselves the contempt and derision of the public; they will lose the respect and co-operation which are necessary to their own success as well as to the success of the public as a whole.

One people do not want to see an aged couple like the Pratts of Atlantic deprived of their house and home and ejected into the street.

Nor would they relish seeing a woman like Mrs. Jane Marston of Brighton ejected from the home in which she has supported her children and her venerable parents as well.

We are emerging from a period in which all the public have been compelled to make sacrifices. The wage-earner has taken his reduced wages or complete loss of work. The business man has taken a decrease in business. Public employes have sustained wage-slashes. The banks must take their losses and they should do it ungrudgingly when it is possible for them to save the homes of worthy people who will pay their obligations when good times set in again upon them.

But, fortunately, a system has been devised by which these innocent people can be retained in their homes without loss to the banks. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, a product of the Roosevelt New Deal, will take these home mortgages from the banks and give the banks the bonds of the United States government in their place. In many instances these transactions can represent an actual profit to the banks because the banks will be obtaining bonds with a guaranteed interest in exchange for mortgages which are utterly frozen and non-producing.

It should be said in all fairness that many of the banks of Massachusetts have co-operated with a degree of enthusiasm and solicitude that is both comforting and admirable. The hardship is being caused to our distressed people by some of the bankers who are money-grinders, who have no appreciation of the co-operative spirit of the New Deal and who have no fine appreciation of the anguish visited upon helpless people by their mercenary actions.

The Nantasket Line

We sincerely hope that the people of Hull will be successful in their plan to keep the Nantasket steamboat line in operation.

This line has both a sentimental and a practical value to us.

There is scarcely a man or woman in New England but who can remember as a child boarding the steamer in Boston, sailing down the harbor and the joyful day that followed on the great white beach at Nantasket.

Of course, the automobile has played havoc with the patronage of this short-line run. Its passenger and its freight business have suffered. Yet the line transports many thousands of people annually who prefer the cool sail down the harbor on the hot days of summer. Moreover, the State itself has a substantial investment in the Nantasket Beach Reservation which might induce it to offer a subsidy for the maintenance of the line in the event that private citizens fail in their task to keep it alive and functioning.

Stars and Stripes

Three hundred persons are going to pay $25 each to hear Dr. Einstein play his fiddle. You can understand higher mathematics on an "E" string.

Senator Dickinson (R) of Iowa says we'll be lucky if we get any tax relief in the next twenty years, but he doesn't state whether that's a threat or a promise.

Who cares if there is another gasoline price war? We don't drink it any more.

"Big Bill" Tilden may be a racketeer, but that doesn't make him a public enemy.

It's too bad Sir Thomas Lipton can't be here for the coming yacht race and win again the cup for being the world's champion loser.

A SAD STORY

Heard on King st., Charleston, S. C.: "Please, boss, won't you help a po' ole colored woman? Ah ain't got a gallon o' gin in mah house."

Some of the cars at the National Auto Show look so nice you almost want to be run over by them.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Among intellectual flowerings following repeal is the mental urge for knowledge about wines. Owen Wister and Julian Street, both novelists, are reputed best informed on their proper usages. But they belong to a somewhat older generation. The wine drinking era of Depew, Morgan and Berry Wall.

O. O. McIntyre

The oncoming generation is totally ignorant as to the significance of such names as Bourgueil, Chateau-Chaton, Montbazillac or Haut-Brion. And whether they are red or white, sweet or dry, still or sparkling. Wines had two classifications to them—"Dago red" and spiked cider dubbed champagne.

Sudden establishment of wine bins in homes where they had been abandoned has offered a new hobby for wealthy folk. They are having fun in the new diversion of racking shelves with rehoboams, jeroboams, magnums, quarts and imperial pints in geometrical array.

Every swank hotel has re-established the wine steward with the chained key circling his neck. Many have been brought from London and Paris and others off the liners. The most notable understander of wines in hotels is Oscar. He knows 200 vintages by smell.

Paragraphic throw-back for those born in the 80's and 90's: Trading flour sacks to the grocer for candy; corn silk cigarettes that gave you "yeller janders"; the long, narrow mud-slides from the river bank into the water for swimmers; sal sacks on cistern spouts to catch the wiggle tails; deliciously tart May apples; hog's head jelly, and Frank Reade's extravagant exaggerations — Submarine, Iron Horse and Flying Ship. Such crazy ideas for young boys!

The vivacious young theatrical lawyer Fanny Holzmann has realized the ambition of most lawyers—to practice law and see the world. Among her clients is Noel Coward and many other British playwrights and she is forever going up the gangplank here and there. She is a Brooklyn girl who is at home in the shooting lodges of Scotland, the London first night and the Paris salons. A satisfactory exemplar of the new freedom of women.

Sixth avenue's carnival handy-dandy grows increasingly tumultuous in the 40's. Penny curio halls, fortune tellers, shooting galleries and the like are now augmented by an undersea exhibit and an incubator show is on the way. The Hippodrome has an indoor circus to add to the medley. The busiest time is after theater, when crowds stroll by to listen to the cash-penny carols.

Hollywood's newest and shyest celebrity is blushing Max Miller, the "I Cover the Waterfront" author. He has become an intimate of Charlie Chaplin, with whom he attends rounds of parties. And Colins Clement says Chaplin always stands on the author's foot to keep him from crawling under rugs and things.

Horror note: Paducah, Ky., which has a cigar, hat, laundry, big hotel, office building and river excursion steamer named for Irvin Cobb, now has a beauty salon called "Irvin Cobb Beauty Service," for goodness sake!

There is a blustery swagger about those wide-shouldered, belted camel hair overcoats with incredibly large pockets. I see Gene Buck, Ben Ali Haggin, Floyd Gibbons and William Gaxton swirling along in them and begin to feel hartschaffnerish.

Today I barged from a Madison avenue toggery with the loonest I could find, double-breasted, hugely pearl buttoned and jauntily pleated in the back. I've been side-glancing slyly in the mirror at intervals since. But I don't make the grade. Nothing will give me the swole-chic of the tweedy voyageur. The nearest I get to tweediness is a sort of tweedle-de-dee!

THE DOG

I like a dog at my feet when I read,
Whatever his size or whatever his breed.
A dog now and then that will muzzle my hand
As though I were the greatest of men in the land,
And trying to tell me it's pleasant to be
On such intimate terms with a fellow like me.

I like a dog at my side when I eat.
I like to give him a bit of my meat;
And though mother objects and insists it is bad
To let dogs in the dining room, still I am glad
To behold him stretched out on the floor by my chair
It's cheering to see such a faithful friend there.

A dog leads a curious life at the best.
By the wag of his tail is his pleasure expressed.
He pays a high tribute to man when he stays
True to his friend to the end of his days.
And I wonder sometimes if it happens to be
That dogs pay no heed to the faults which men see.

Should I prove a failure; should I stoop to wrong;
Be weak at a time when I should have been strong,
Should I lose my money, the gossips would sneer
And fill with my blundering many an ear,
But still, as I opened my door, I should see
My dog wag his tail with a welcome for me.

Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

DO YOU remember these lines from Kipling's "IF"?

"IF YOU CAN KEEP YOUR HEAD WHEN ALL ABOUT YOU ARE LOSING THEIRS AND BLAMING IT ON YOU—"

If you have ever tried to do something which you knew to be right, but which was also difficult and unpopular . . . you will appreciate these lines . . . you'll know how much courage it takes to live them

It is not the danger and hardship of the act itself that keeps most of us from embarking on new and noble adventures . . . IT'S THE FEAR OF BEING MISUNDERSTOOD . . . LAUGHED AT . . . CRITICIZED . . . SNUBBED.

Elsie Robinson

Human beings are gregarious animals. We like to live with the herd, think with the herd, be in right with the herd.

We can stand starvation and disease easier than we can stand unpopularity or ostracism. And contrariam is not merely a sentimental handicap . . . it is a very real danger.

The old saying, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me." IS NOT TRUE. Words CAN hurt us terribly. They can do irreparable harm.

And nothing will arouse the vicious criticism of the herd as surely as DOING SOMETHING DIFFERENT. The thing you are about to do may be a brave and honorable act . . . it may be the only thing you CAN DO to keep your self-respect . . . but these arguments do not count with the herd.

IF IT'S DIFFERENT, IT'S DAMNED.

Christ was crucified, and Socrates given the hemlock, not because they advocated new radical philosophies. The public knew nothing of their philosophies and cared less. But they did know that they were Different . . . and different people got their collective goat. So they did away with Christ and Socrates . . . and thereby hoped to make the world safe for Smugocracy.

All of which you will realize very keenly if you are trying to do something different in your own life . . . something that seems necessary and righteous to you, but nevertheless, violates the traditional law.

And you must face that fact very frankly when you're laying out your course. YOU CAN'T EXPECT TO HAVE YOUR CAKE AND EAT IT, TOO. If you can't stand criticism, if you can't exist without the approval of your contemporaries, then DON'T START ANYTHING. For you're surely going to suffer plenty of punishment if you do.

But, on the other hand, if you have the stamina to stand the gaff of being a maverick, IT'S WORTH IT.

You may miss the comforts of companionship and the plaudits of popularity . . . BUT YOU WILL FEEL A PRIDE AND FIRE AND FURY OF ADVENTURE WHICH THE CORRALLED CAN NEVER KNOW.

And sometimes . . . not often, but once in a great while . . . you will glimpse God and feel that you, too, are fighting for the TRUTH.

Roosevelt Steers Clear of European Affairs

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Time is the ally of all Americans who believe that the traditional foreign policy bequeathed to them by George Washington in the farewell address is the best chart by which to navigate the American Ship of State.

Less than a year ago the Roosevelt administration and the Democratic leadership of the Senate were attempting to take the United States into the League of Nations through the back door of the League Court.

Now come Sen. Robinson of Arkansas, majority leader of the Senate, with the welcome assurance, following a conference with the President, that all efforts to ratify the league protocols now before the Senate, have, for the time being at least, been abandoned.

The reason given by the senator for this decision is that "the situation in Europe is so complex that this is not the opportune time to proceed with the resolution relating to the World Court."

This would seem to be an extraordinary line of reasoning on the part of those senators who originally advocated American membership in the league and have continued to press for American membership in the League Court.

It was because of the complexity of the European situation following the great war that President Wilson urged the United States to go into the League and into the League Court.

AROUSED PUBLIC

And this the United States probably would have done had not the Senate insisted upon taking ample time to examine the covenant—which is the constitution of the League—and to debate its every article until the American people were thoroughly informed in regard to what American entrance into the League would mean for this country.

In the light of the information, which the great debate in the Senate on the League convenant assembled and distributed throughout the household of the nation, public sentiment became aroused and then it organized in support of the anti-League senators—much less than a third of the members of the Senate to begin with. Finally these senators were able to muster enough votes to prevent the ratification of the Treaty of Versailles, which included the League convenant.

Had it not been for the time at the disposal of the Senate and the good use which the Senate made of this time in the exercise and debate of the proposed reversal of George Washington's foreign policy, which ratification of the league covenant would have involved, it is doubtful in the extreme that the United States would have escaped the menace of league membership.

And it is in accord with the protocols for the league court. Walking delegates for the League of Nations have effected a national organization whose purpose it is to stampede the Senate into taking the United States into the league through the trap-door of its court.

SAVED THE DAY

During the Hoover administration, this organization of internationalists were confident they had the votes to compel ratification without further delay. But each time the attempt was made a few brave senators, forgetting partisanship, in utter disregard of their political future and quickened only by a firm and patriotic resolve to keep this country out of the League of Nations and out of all its departments, were able to save the day for the American people.

They played for time, time in which the plain people of this country might inform themselves of the dangers they would invite by abandoning our traditional foreign policy to enter the league or the league court.

As a matter of fact these senators are the patriots who are chiefly responsible for the decision just announced by Senator Robinson. These senators have let the Senate know that any attempt at this session to drag the United States into the league court will not only knock "the new deal" into a cocked hat, but will reduce to congressional kindling wood the whole Roosevelt legislative program for national recovery.

In the fight to keep this country out of the league and in the history of the fight which kept this country out of the league is repeating itself. It was the senators, both Republican and Democratic, who cheerfully broke every political rule and offered the sacrifice their renomination and re-election to the Senate, who prevented the ratification of the league covenant. It is the same type of senator fired by the same fervent patriotism that has forced the shelving of the league court protocols for this session and that will ultimately bring about their rejection.
